Police Head Reshuffling Detectives; Plans to Quit

Brown Admits His Investigators Are 'The Weakest Link' In District Force

Revelation that a drastic shakeup of the Detective Bureau already is under way, and that Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Metropolitan Police superintendent, definitely will retire, last night provided dramatic climaxes to the Congressional police investigation.

The climaxes came in this order:

First—Maj. Brown disclosed that thorough reorganization of the Detective Bureau has been under way, on paper, for six weeks, while admitting to the House Police Investigating Subcommittee yesterday that his plain-clothes division is the one glaring weakness in the department.

Second—Back in his office at Police Headquarters after a two-hour questioning on Capitol Hill, Maj. Brown told a Washington Post reporter, "I will not be in the Police Department another winter."

But what puzzled members of the subcommittee as much as any development of the inquiry thus far was Brown's statement that the broad outlines of the detective bureau shakeup are being drawn by Capt. Ira E. Keck, acting chief of detectives. This is because:

Acting Capt. Earl P. Hartman, head of the special investigations squad called by some police the "Gestapo," charged before the subcommittee that Keck has neither the background nor the experience for his job.

Laughs at Gestapo Charge

Brown and Hartman were called before the subcommittee specifically to explain charges made at previous investigation sessions that the "Gestapo" not only exists, but is actively engaged in spying on members of the department.

Brown dismissed the charge with a laugh and then went on to explain that the squad investigated two policemen linked by complaint to the District Commissioners with gambling in the District, and made reports on two others found in betting establishments by its undercover men.

Hartman, at first, hotly denied the accusation, insisted at all times that his squad was by no means a "Gestapo," and, then, under a flurry of questions from Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, acting investigation chairman, admitted that he and his men investigated at least four members of the department.

The phrase that has tumbled from the lips of one ranking police officer after another during four days of the inquiry, fell from the lips of the 66-year-old major when he was asked what he thought of the caliber of his detective bureau.

"The Weakest Link"

"It is the weakest link in the set-up," he said. "The reorganization will be completed as soon as possible.

"I started reorganization of the bureau when the chief of detectives (Inspector Bernard W. Thompson) applied for retirement six weeks ago. Capt. Keck is working it out now.

"I want to change the working hours of the men. No man can stand up under the strain of working morning and night—10 and 16 hours a day on ordinary cases and 20 and 22 hours on cases like the Strieff murder.

"I want to change the squads and the assignment of the men and I

As a salute to Independence Day, today's Post brings you the complete words and music of "The Star-Spangled Banner." Nation to Renew Flag Pledge

Greatest July 4 Program Yet Will Be Warning to Dictators

President to Speak, Stone Will Lead Oath of Allegiance

Americans here and throughout the Nation will celebrate their 165th Independence Day today in ceremonies planned to warn dictators broad that when we say "Independence"—we mean it.

At the same split second—shortly after 4 p. m.—millions of citizens will speak this simple, familiar oath of allegiance to the flag, led over the airwaves by Harlan Fiske Stone, Chief Justice of the United States:

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

President Roosevelt, who has compared this "hour of trial" to the darkest days of 1776, will address the Nation by radio at 4 p. m. from the President's room of the new Franklin D. Roosevelt Library in Hyde Park, N. Y.

A gigantic chorus of voices from Maine to California, after repeating the oath to the flag, will sing the National Anthem, led over the radio by Lucy Monroe, the "Star-Spangled Soprano" of stage, screen and radio.

And, of course, Washington will have its traditional display of fireworks on the Monument Grounds at 8:35 in the evening, a display that will be bigger and better then ever this year because of the rain that

National Unity Rally's Program

Here is the schedule for the 10-minute "national unity" radio program—expected to reach into every corner of the land—which will be broadcast at 4 p. m. Eastern standard time, today:

President Roosevelt, 5-minute speech.

Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, leading the entire listening population in the pledge to the flag.

Singing by the entire audience of "The Star-Spangled Banner," with Songstress Lucy Monroe leading.

Motorists everywhere are asked by Mayor LaGuardia of New York, director of civil defense, to stop their cars during the ceremony.

Lightning Takes A Life

2 Killed as Storm Routs Heat; Missing Child Feared Drowned

A heavy thundershower last evening brought relief from muggy weather, but took two lives. A motorist was struck by lightning a pedestrian was hit by an auto at the height of the rain.

During the day six persons were treated for prostration, and a child was reported drowned while wading in the Anacostia.

The mercury, which soared to a record high of 96 Wednesday, rose to but 88 degrees yesterday, but combined with abnormal humidity, which range dfrom 69 to 89, to keep Washington uncomfortable for the third consecutive day.

Approximately an inch of rain fell during last night's shower, and the Weather Bureau promised that cooler, cloudy weather would follow today. Fair and warmer is the outlook for tomorrow.

William Butler, 33, colored, of 127 Quander Street Southeast, was struck by lightning just as the storm broke over the city at 6 o'clock.

Butler was about to get into a truck parked in front of 427 Fourth Street Southwest, when he was struck by the bolt. He was found lying underneath a tree by the curbstone, and was pronounced dead by an Emergency Hospital ambulance doctor.

Blond, 6-year-old Robin Grimes was reported drowned while wading in the Anacostia River yesterday morning. At 5 p. m. his body had not been recovered.

His father, Ralph Grimes, Capitol Theater employe, of 229 Thirty-fourth Street Northeast, still had hopes that the boy would be found alive, neighbors said.

Robin had been playing with Conrad Wilkins, 7, of 231 Thirty-

They were Robert R. Longyear, 5101 Tilden Street Northwest, and Louis Hood, 6313 Maple Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md.

The boys left Washington several weeks ago, young Hood's mother said last night, to drive up to the Longyear's summer home at Quissett, Mass. On Wednesday evening, she said they went for a sail. When they did not return after several hours the Coast Guard began a search.

The two lads were sighted at daybreak yesterday by the New Bedford, Marthas Vineyard and Nantucket steamship Naushon, the Associated Press reported.

Both wore life-jackets and had clung to the sides of the 19-foot craft all night. They blamed the accident on a new rope which would not play out properly and capsized their craft. Later, young Hood called his mother by long-distance phone.

Robert's father is divisional assistant of the Special Division in the State Department which is charged with assisting American refugees abroad, and Louis' father is head of the Valuation Department in the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Paderewski's Body Brought To Temporary Haven Here

The body of Ignace Jan Paderewski was removed from a train at 5:30 p. m. here yesterday while great crescendos of sound thundered over his casket from the clouds.

There was blinding lightning and incessant thunder as the dark gray coffin, containing the Polish patriot and pianist, was taken off the train and rolled along the platform through a file of darkly dressed men and women from the Polish Embassy.

Behind the coffin moved a dozen Polish veterans of the World War, in pale blue uniforms and, ahead, lined at attention before the open doors of a hearse, eight noncommissioned officers from the Arlington Cantonment saluted.

The body had left the car on which in life the pianist had toured America, acclaimed everywhere. Yesterday there was no sound about it but the quiet words spoken by Polish Ambassador Jan Ciechanowski to the musician's sister, Mme. Weilkonska, 82, of New York, and the tremendous pounding of the storm.

The body was taken to the Polish Embassy, 2640 Sixteenth Street Northwest, where, from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. today, it will lie in state. Burial will be at 10:45 a. m. Saturday.

Air Magazine Talks of English Surprise Move Before Aug. 1

By the Associated Press

London, July 3.—Britain's day and night air offensive over France and western Germany, now three weeks old, brought an open hint tonight that it may be a prelude to an attempt to seize a continental foothold by invasion before August 1.

The magazine Aeroplane, which is Britain's leading non-official authority on military aviation, suggested: "Before this month is out, there may be developments which would cause Germany more doubts and hearten all people over whose lands the struggle must be renewed."

France, the article said, is probably concerned in strategical help to Russia, now engaging the German and allied army and air force on a 2,000-mile eastern front.

Occupation Forces Cut

At about the same time the Reuters News Agency distributed a dispatch, credited to independent French sources, which said that half the German forces of occupation had been withdrawn from France.

Britain's steady offensive against Nazi bases, factories and communications continued during the night with heavy attacks on northwestern and western Germany after the R. A. F. had attacked northern France in two broad sweeps during the day. Bombers, with heavy fighter protection, attacked the railways in the Hazebrouck-Saint Omer area. One British bomber and seven fighters were acknowledged lost, but the R. A. F. said 11 German planes were shot down.

[In Berlin, it was announced a number of civilians were killed and wounded by R. A. F. bombs dropped in northwestern Germany during the night.

[No military damage was caused but a number of houses were destroyed and damaged, and three British planes were shot down, German sources said.]

While raiders flew across the Channel throughout the day in a sky almost cloudless, the R. A. F. disclosed that Pilot Officer William Isaac Hall of the American Eagle Squadron was missing from Wednesday's forays, in which the squadron bagged three German planes.

Joss Convicted Of Manslaughter In Wife's Death

Bath, Me. (Friday), July 4 (AP).—A Superior Court jury early today convicted Dr. Merrill E. Joss, 34, Richmond physician, of manslaughter in the slaying of his physician wife, Dr. Luverne Harris Joss, 38.

Justice Raymond Fellows immediately adjourned court without passing sentence on the Portland, Oreg., born doctor, whom the State tried on a murder charge.

Sentence, which could range from a minimum of a fine to a maximum of 20 years' imprisonment, was deferred because the verdict was received on Independence Day, a legal holiday.

To Check on Mine In Maine Sinking

Harpswell, Me., July 3 (AP).—Representative James C. Oliver (Republican) of Maine, said tonight that a Congressional investigation of the loss of the cabin cruiser Don and all 35 persons aboard and been ordered and that it would include consideration of a possibility the craft struck a mine that had drifted from the European war zone.

Oliver said that Representative Schuyler O. Bland, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, of which Oliver is a member, had appointed him a committee of one to conduct the inquiry.

Local investigation of the disaster, which occurred in Casco Bay, Sunday, while the Don was bound from this seashore town to Monhegan Island with a skipper and 34 picknickers, has failed to determine what happened to the 44-foot craft or where it went down.

Enemy Halted Along Fateful Berezina River, Moscow Says

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Friday), July 4.—Red troops fighting a vast bloody battle on the banks of the Berezina River east of Minsk on the path to Moscow threw back a rising tide of Nazi soldiers and inflicted heavy losses on them, the Soviet information bureau announced today.

The Soviet troops were reported countercharging with bayonets.

Thousands of German dead fell in the attempt to cross the river, the Russians said, implying that the Nazi broadside again had failed. The communique did not, however, say specifically that the river had not been crossed, as was claimed Thursday.

To the north, in Latvia, however, German troops forced the Dvina River and engaged Red troops in violent combat near Jekabpils, halfway between Dvinsk and Riga, former Latvian capital, the communique acknowledged.

The Russians said the Germans succeeded in crossing the Dvina only after bringing up fresh forces, and added that Red troops again engaged them fiercely along new lines near Jekabpils.

Fighting still raged in southern Poland near Tarnopol, 30 miles west of the old Soviet frontier, and at Bobruisk, 80 miles southeast of Minsk, where Red troops have reportedly blunted the Nazi drive for several days.

The Germans were encountering "stubborn resistance" everywhere, the Soviets said, adding that the Red air force was dealing crippling blows.

The Nazis threw lines of tanks into the vital battle of the Berezina.

"Throughout the day our air force struck blows at enemy mechanized units crossing the Divna River as well as at Bobruisk and Tarnopol," the communique said.

Nazis Dislike Bayonets

The Nazis showed little appetite for bayonet fighting in the vital Minsk area, and German tanks avoided combat with heavy Soviet tanks, it was added.

Here, within 400 miles of Moscow, where Napoleon's grand army bled to death in retreat, and 300 miles to the south, in the Ukraine the regu-

Home Loan Bank To Shift 1,000 Employes to N. Y.

A move toward the decentralization of Federal employes came yesterday with announcement that approximately 1,000 workers under the Federal Home Loan Bank Board would be moved to New York.

This move, said John H. Fahey, FHLBB chairman, is in compliance with the President's request that as many nondefense agencies as possible transfer operations from Washington to make Government space available to defense activity.

The agency has under its jurisdiction the 12 Federal Home Loan Banks, the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, which supervises the Federal savings and loans associations, and is the first important agency to be moved.

The HOLC has approximately 7,800 employes, of which 960, or 12.2 per cent, are located here. The bank board has 152 employes here and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation has but 38 employes in Washington and a small force in the field.

"While it is anticipated that most of the employes affected will move to New York, efforts will be made to work out transfers to other Government agencies for those who do not wish to move," the announcement said. Employes will receive ample notice at the date of removal, Fahey said, and "reasonable moving expenses will be paid."

Enough employes will be left in Washington to care for local contact work.

The FHLBB's largest operation, the HOLC, was decentralized in 1934 and 1935 and has since been conducted through ten regional offices.

Storm Raised as Army Asks Right to Use Troops Abroad

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

An Army request for authority to retain National Guardsmen, selectees and reservists in active rervice and for power to send them outside the Western Hemisphere stirred up a storm of controversy in Congress yesterday.

Amid protests from non-interventionist circles, who promise another full-dress foreign policy fight over the proposal, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, declared he has information the Administration plans to send American troops to occupy Iceland later this month.

Chief reaction to the Army recommendation, made by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, in a report on the military situation, came from the militant opponents of Administration foreign policy, but some Administration supporters on Capitol Hill indorsed the proposal as a necessary defense move.

Official sources refused comment on Wheeler's statement. The State Department referred newspapermen to the War Department, and there a spokesman said the Department did not discuss issues with individual Congressmen publicly. The Navy restated its policy of "neither confirming nor denying" reports of possible ship movements.

Wheeler would not reveal the source of his information, but declared at a press conference that he understood that American troop ships and planes would embark for Iceland, astride the North Atlantic sea lanes, about July 23 or 24.

United States forces would relieve British troops occupying the sister kingdom of Nazi-occupied Denmark, and American freighters would carry supplies there for reshipment on English ships to Britain under the plan, Wheeler said he was informed.

Gen. Marshall did not mince words in his report in portraying what he saw as the seriousness of the world situation. He declared that Ameri-

U. S. to Act if Japan Attacks Russia or Dutch East Indies

Philippines Tightens Control Over Exports As Tokyo Recalls Ship

Warning Implied In Expressed Hope For Pacific Peace

By the Associated Press

The United States, in effect, served notice on Japan yesterday not to carry out its Axis obligations by attacking Russia's Siberian flank or moving into the Dutch East Indies.

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles said in answer to press conference questions that he hoped that Japan's attitude toward the Russo-German conflict will not disturb the peace of the Pacific.

Welles made no reference to the possibilities of a Japanese attack on the Dutch East Indies or Siberia, but he plainly indicated that the United States will use all its influence to avert such an occurrence.

Policy Adopted

A Japanese Imperial conference recently approved a policy to be adopted in view of the changed Far Eastern situation. Welles indicated that the United States Government had no information on the Nipponese decision.

Ever since German troops invaded Russia, policy planners have hoped that Japan would reorient its policy toward the Axis, perhaps even break away from it altogether and chart an independent course.

Warning to Japan

Successive moves in Far Eastern policy have been planned to encourage Japan to adopt this course and at the same time to warn Tokyo that the United States will not give in to Japanese plans for domination of the Pacific.

Diplomatic observers have said they detected a shift recently in the political atmosphere in Japan regarding Germany. There is understood to be a considerable difference of opinion inside the Japanese government over the policy that should be adopted toward the European conflict. The Administration here has real hopes that the Japanese will decide to forsake the Berlin-Rome Axis.

Manila, July 3.—The Customs Bureau announced tonight that henceforth all departing Japanese vessels would be inspected to prevent any evasion of the export control system, a move interpreted in shipping circles as apparently intended to counteract the possible effects of Japan requisitioning such ships.

[At the same time in Tokyo, Koh Ishii, Japanese government information spokesman, said Japan is considering declaration of a safety zone in her territorial waters. The plan apparently would be similiar to the safety zone established by the governments of North and South America to supervise shipping and keep warships of belligerents out of territorial waters, the United Press reported.]

The action was taken soon after the Tabacalera Shipping Co., of Manila, was notified from Kobe that the Japanese freighter Kyusyu Maru, loaded with Philippine cargo for the United States, had been requisitioned by the Japanese government and ordered to remain in port.

May Stop Shipments

Any repetition of the Kyusyu Maru order, it was believed would lead Philippines officials to exercise authority to prevent shipment of war materials aboard Japanese vessels, even though ocnsigned to the United States.

[In Tokyo the postoffice announced cancellation of the sailings of the Kimikawa Maru and Bordeaux Maru, both of which had been scheduled to depart for New York. The Tatsuta Maru will leave Yokohama July 10 as scheduled but will touch only at Pacific ports. No reason was given for the cancellations.]

Some sources feared that such cargoes, if unloaded in Japanese

Bombers From U. S. Carrying Concentrated Food to Britain

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, July 3.—America's long range bombing planes, now being piloted in numbers to Great Britain, are helping to outwit the enemy blockade of the British Isles by carrying substantial cargoes of concentrated foods to the beleaguered British people.

These massive planes are doing vital service for the British, not only in the destruction of the enemy, but are helping to circumvent the object of submarine warfare—starvation of the British Isles.

More than a ton of food concentrates, principally powdered milk and eggs, form a part of each cargo carried by the bombers now crossing the Atlantic.

Approximately 2,100 pounds of each cargo is allotted to such concentrated foods, it was disclosed today.

England, short of nutritious dairy products as the result of almost two years of war, derives the equivalent of 84,000 eggs from every ton of powdered eggs received via bomber. Her children, invalids and old people receive the equivalent of 7,144 quarts of that essential, basic food, milk, for every ton of dried milk ferried to her shores.

Drive Opened Into Ukraine From Rumania, Prut Crossed

Front Broadened

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 3. — German armies on the Eastern Front have run into bad weather which, combined with the "obstinate resistance" of the Russians, is affecting the fighting, the official German news agency D. N. B. said tonight.

In the region of Lwow, in southeastern Poland, even snow has been reported, D. N. B. said.

This obstacle to the German offensive was reported after Reichsfuehrer Hitler's field headquarters had announced that Soviet resistance now appears broken under the impact of a triumphant Nazi drive along "the entire front between the Black Sea and the Arctic Ocean." The push was extended with launching of a massive drive on the old border of Russia's rich Ukraine.

Hitler Edits Communique

In phrases edited by Hitler himself, the high command reported that German, Finnish, Hungarian and Rumanian forces now were engaged in one move along the entire 2,000-mile front, with the likely objectives Russia's three most important cities: Kiev, the Ukraine capital, Moscow and Leningrad.

[International News Service reported that Berlin estimates Russia has lost 1,000,000 of her best troops in 12 days of fighting.]

At the scene of Napoleon's disaster, the Germans said, they pressed further along the road to Moscow with the reported crossing of the Berezina River near Borisov.

[The Russian high command said that the Germans had been thrown back in repeated attempts to cross the river.]

[Stockholm reported that German parachutists and armored detachments have reached Walk, on the border between Estonia and Latvia, while other Nazi units have reached additional points on the frontier. Predictions were that the Nazis would reach Tallinn, capital of Estonia, and Narva, southwest of Leningrad, within a few days.]

This very spot where the Nazis claim to have crossed the sluggish Berezina was the site of a bloody engagement during Napoleon's retreat from Moscow in November of 1812. Borisov is about 50 miles beyond Minsk and almost 400 miles from Moscow.

Report General Retreat

The high command communique opened with announcement of the drive in the direction of Russia's rich industrial and agricultural Ukraine.

"German and Rumanian units," it said, "advancing shoulder to shoulder from northern Moldavia yesterday crossed the Prut River and are

Ickes Widens Drive On 'Gas' Wasters

Urges Police Throughout East Arrest Fume Belchers, Jackrabbit Starters

Secretary of Interior Ickes' plan to conserve gasoline by arresting "jackrabbit start" drivers and operators of fume-belching autos, starting tomorrow, will soon be extended from the District to all National Park areas and other cities on the eastern seaboard, Ickes disclosed yesterday.

He told a press conference that appeals would be issued to municipalities and highway police throughout the Atlantic Coast area, where petroleum shortages are imminent.

"I suspect," the new Defense Coordinator of Petroleum stated, "that it will require more than persuasion to get people to drive economically."

By curbing speeds, adjusting motors to maximum efficiency and eliminating jackrabbit starts, Ickes said, 20 per cent of gasoline consumption, or about 250,000,000 gallons a month, would be saved.

Meantime, he disclosed, a series of other steps were being considered or were already under way to meet the problem of impending shortage of oil and gas in Eastern States.

Ickes listed the following:

1. At a conference yesterday, where the heads of a dozen Federal agencies discussed the problem, Navy Secretary Frank Knox promised to turn over to the coordinator two of the Navy's largest and fastest tankers. The vessels, with a capacity of 150,000 barrels and a speed of 18 knots, willl be placed on the Gulf Coast-Atlantic Coast run.

2. Deputy Coordinator Ralph Davies last week telegraphed all oil companies suggesting they use tank cars and absorb the increased transportation cost themselves. Standard Oil of New Jersey has offered to cooperate and will use 1,400 cars on this basis immediately. The first train of 25 cars will leave Lima, Ohio, Monday. Other companies are expected to follow suit and will make use of all presently available tank cars.

To facilitate this, Ickes said, Interstate Commerce Commission Chairman Eastman told yesterday's conference that he would study the possibility of reducing tank car freight rates for the duration of the shortage.

3. Maritime Commission Chairman Land is studying the possibility of repatriating certain American-owned tankers now under Panamanian registry.

4. Ickes held a conference last week with anthracite miners and operators to arrange for larger coal production to serve the New England area.

5. A plan has been laid out detailing the type and location of new oil pipelines which will be acted upon "without loss of time" immediately after passage of the pending Cole bill, which gives the Government the necessary authority to take over rights of way.

Hints Offered for Drivers

From Tulsa, Okla., meanwhile, William F. Love, secretary of the Natural Gasoline Association, offered the following eight-point program of hints to the motorist who would conserve gasoline:

Have the motor "tuned" at least every 5,000 miles. An improper gasoline mixture alone can cause a two degrees below the motor's 10 per cent waste. Set the spark faint knocking point. There is an extremely slight power loss, but a gallon of gasoline stretches a mile farther.

Clean and adjust spark plugs frequently. One fleet owner found that cleaning and adjusting them every 1,000 miles cut his fuel bill 10 per cent.

Avoid "Jack Rabbit" starts and "racing pickups" in second gear. The engine can't burn all the gasoline it's getting. Conversely, rushing madly up to stoplines, then slamming on the brakes also wastes gasoline.

Watch tire pressures. A low tire offers more resistance to pulling. Properly inflated tires also wear longer.

Park in the shade. Gasoline vaporizes easily and a surprising amount of gasoline will evaporate through the tiny air hole of the gas tank cap during hot weather.

Keep the battery well charged for quick starts. The fuel pump is pumping gasoline away during those slow, grinding starts before the engine fires. Avoid unnecessary choking.

Clean the air filter often. When it's dirty and clogged the carburetor may not get enough air, the gasoline mixture gets too rich and mileage falls.

Finally, drive at moderate speeds. It takes a third more gasoline to go a mile at 60 miles an hour than at 40.

Blitz Revives Old Art of Semaphore Signals

Wig-Wag System Gains Importance In Communications

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 3.—Lightning war has brought to life an almost forgotten military art.

Out here, soldiers who will man the guns of the Twenty-ninth Division's new provisional anti-tank battalion are busy learning long-distance sign language. They are laborously struggling with the alphabet expressed with little red-and-white flags to send messages quickly over short distance.

Anti-tank men must learn semaphore signalling, all but discarded with the advent of radio and field telephones, because blitz warfare is too fast for the newer methods.

All action against tanks is lightning action. The guns must be rushed into position at top speed, served as rapidly as they can be loaded and fired, pulled out of position and whisked to meet new threats in a matter of split seconds.

When the guns are in battery, ready to fire, they must throw out feelers, men in forward observation posts to watch for enemy tanks and send back a warning. And that is where wigwag comes in.

There is no time to set up telephone lines and less time to reel wire back when the guns are ready to move. Too many radios would be required to make the use of walkie-talkies feasible.

So nothing is left but some sort of visual signaling and the Army is going back to the type it developed and used with much success 80 years ago in the Civil War.

All men who will serve in gun crews or security parties will be taught the semaphore system of signaling, it was understood.

R. O. T. C. Trainees Pass Gas Tests

Fore George C. Meade, Md., July 3 (AP).—More than 600 college students, marching under orders, walked in formation into a mass of grayish-white smoke clouds today.

While they were still trying to get their bearings grenades began exploding around them and they found themselves caught in spreading tear gas as well.

They hastily grabbed masks, donned them, and had their first official experience of marching unharmed through clouds of the irritating gas. It was the final exercise in an afternoon's program devoted to defense against chemical attack—part of the training received by the students in their Reserve Officers Training Corps six-week summer course here.

The school is under the direction of Maj. Stanley E. Hartman and Capt. Thomas W. O'Byrne, of the Twenty-ninth Division, and Capt. Edward M. Hoshall, post chemical officer.

20,000 Soldiers Leave Meads for Holiday

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 3 (AP).—Nearly 20,000 soldiers began a mass migration out of Fort Meade early this evening for a three-day Fourth of July holiday.

The 20,000 approximate 80 per cent of the personnel of all of the units of this Army reservation, including the Twenty-ninth Division. About 5,000 more men will remain in camp under orders, which provide that 20 per cent of each unit must be on duty at all times.

Included is an "alert" battalion on hand full strength for emergency duty.

On the cost itself there will be no ceremonies tomorrow except the regulation 48-gun salute to the States of the Union.

Luxury Era Ended By War, U. S. Told

OPM Official Warns America Must Be Satisfied With Essentials

In the most outspoken warning yet to emerge from a defense agency, the head of the OPM's section on conservation and substitution yesterday gave notice that the American standard of living would decline under pressure of defense demands for critical materials, and that for the duration of the emergency the era of luxuries was over.

The official, Robert E. McConnell, told a press conference that although there will be no want, and that America can have the necessities of life, "we cannot have the luxuries of life and all-out defense, too."

Not only will the defense program foreclose the "vastly expanded output" of consumers' goods which could be absorbed by the increased purchasing power resulting from defense activity, he said, but the scarcity of most metals will prevent even the "normal" production of consumers' goods.

Yachts Are Out

"It won't be patriotic for anyone to buy a yacht, and it won't be patriotic for anyone to own two cars if one will do," he said.

McConnell added that the Nation must resign itself to a period of "ersatz" for many products, and must join in a great program of conservation.

He said that already the auto industry had cut its use of strategic metals by 50 per cent, using very little aluminum and less than half the amounts of zinc and copper which formerly were used.

Soon, he said, the OPM would ask filling station operators to display posters headed, "For Defense Save Rubber," and listing five methods of conservation—reduced speeds, slower speeds on curves (where half of the rubber in a tire is consumed), adjusting brakes, aligning wheels and properly inflating tires.

Expects Big Saving

These posters, he estimated, would have the effect of saving from 50,000 to 75,000 tons of rubber each year.

Meantime, he said, imports of rubber were being given preference by means of reducing nonessential cargoes from the Far East. Principal of these, he explained, were sugar, tapioca and ilmenite, the latter a paint ingredient.

Good substitutes for the last two items have been developed, he said, and industrial users are cooperating 100 per cent in replacing them with substitute items.

To save on zinc, he said, galvanized fences will be dipped three times instead of five, so that they will require painting in seven years instead of ten. Also, garbage pails will be less heavily galvanized, with the inevitable result that they will not last as long.

Slow Down And Save

R. E. McConnell, chief of the OPM Conservation and Substitution Section, yesterday made public the following table, illustrating in dollars and cents the amounts of gas, oil, and rubber, and their costs, which can be saved by reduced auto speeds in driving 1,000 miles:

| Oil | 25 M.P.H. | 35 M.P.H. | 45 M.P.H. | 55 M.P.H. | 65 M.P.H. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Qts. consumed | ½ | 1 | 1¾ | 3 | 4½ |
| Cost | $0.12 | $0.25 | $0.43 | $0.75 | $1.13 |
| Gasoline | | | | | |
| Gals. consumed | 50 | 55 | 60 | 69 | 80 |
| Cost | $8.75 | $9.63 | $10.50 | $12.08 | $14.00 |
| Tires, cost | 1.50 | 3.00 | 4.50 | 7.50 | 10.50 |

Finns Capture Soviet Bases, Helsinki Says

By the Associated Press

Helsinki (Friday), July 4.—Finland announced today the penetration of Soviet territory by her troops, the capture of "important enemy strongholds," the sinking of a Russian submarine in Finnish minefields and the destruction of 48 Red aircraft up to July 2.

The first Finnish war communique of the new conflict with Russia also told of German and Finnish forces crossing the eastern frontier in the north (presumably in the onslaught against the Russian Arctic port of Murmansk and the Murmansk-Leningrad Railroad).

The communique said:

"Because Russia began open warfare against Finland by bombing civilian centers the following military operations took place today:

"On land frontiers at many points small battles took place in connection with patrol operations. During these operations the enemy attempted to launch an offensive across our borders which was repulsed at all points.

"At several points our forces have captured important enemy strongholds in enemy territory. German-Finnish forces having crossed the eastern border in northern Finland are advancing according to plan. At Hango, artillery fire was exchanged.

"At sea laying of mines, patrol work and reconnaissance have been most important. In order to secure the defense of the Aaland Islands this archipelago has been manned.

"One enemy submarine has been destroyed in our minefields.

"Our own airforce has safeguarded our railway traffic and civilian centers as well as bombed enemy transport, trains, air fields and communications lines.

"Up to July 2 our fighters and antiaircraft had downed 48 enemy machines."

advancing toward the Dneister." The Prut is the boundary between Rumania and Sovietized Bessarabia, while the Dneister is the border of the Ukraine itself.

"Thus," continued the communique, "united armies on the entire front between the Black Sea and the Arctic Ocean have started to attack.

"While hitherto the Soviet Russian leadership tried to catch the German advance near the border and start its own offensive, it now appears that resistance of the Soviet army is broken. Backward movements of the enemy have become apparent on the entire front."

D. N. B. said that Russian supply columns, blocked by destroyed trucks and tanks and other war materials on the roadways, were attacked today by German bombers. Russian losses were described as gigantic.

Claim 149 Planes

The agency said that German fighter planes shot down 52 Russian planes yesterday in the Bialystok area alone, and that an additional 97 planes were destroyed on the ground.

As striking phrases continued to appear in the high command's communiques, yesterday it was stated that "unimaginable chaos" had overtaken the Red Army—it was disclosed that all communiques are scanned and often reworded and rephrased by Hitler. This fast rule obtains even when communiques do not bear the date line of the Fuehrer's headquarters.

Announcement of a German drive over Bessarabia toward the Ukraine was the first high command mention of hostilities in this area, although as early as the second day of the war unofficial sources indicated fierce fighting in some Bessarabian villages.

Allies Capture Palmyra; RAF Bombs Beirut

By International News Service

Cairo, July 3.—Surrender of the major Vichy French air base of Palmyra brought British and Free French occupation of the Syrian protectorate one step nearer completion tonight and firmly entrenched the Allies against German occupation of the strategic Near East battleground.

Field headquarters in Jerusalem stated that the British column which began a westward advance from the Iraq frontier more than two weeks ago battered the final defenses at Palmyra into submission with a furious artillery bombardment Wednesday.

[A Vichy communique stated that Palmyra was surrendered at 1 a. m. Thursday. French forces were said to be resisting a motorized column attacking south and east of Dier Ez Zor. Heavy fighting raged in the Abou Kemal and Damascus regions. The coastal sector was described as quiet, although British warships shelled Damour.

[Beirut was reported severely bombed day and night. Loss of a French submarine was acknowledged but the air ministry claimed one British hurricane fighter and a Bristol Blenheim bomber shot down.]

The British communique also claimed surrender of the Italian garrison at Debra Tabor, one of the last remaining Fascist strongholds in East Africa. Three thousand Italians and 1,200 native troops were taken.

Capture of Palmyra places in British hand an important pumping station on the Syrian branch of the Iraq oil pipe line running to Tripoli. Although the British cut the flow of oil through this branch when Syria was invaded, possession of the Palmyra pumps will enable them to divert precious fuel over temporary lines to their own forces to the south.

[The United Press reported from Beirut that British planes attacked the city three times during the night, badly damaging civilian property and commercial centers including the chamber of commerce.]

The communique also reported bombing attacks on Sidon in the Jebel Druz south of Damascus where direct hits were scored on military barracks and on the airdrome at Nas Rullah which was both bombed and machine-gunned.

Planes of the South African Royal Air Force, it was said, heavily bombed Axis flying boats in Tripoli harbor on the Lebanese coast north of Beirut and attacked motor transport vehicles near Beirut.

Other bombing attacks were carried out against Axis merchant vessels in the harbor of Tripoli, on the Libyan coast, where several ships "appeared to catch fire" and where harbor works were set ablaze, the communique added.

At Benghazi, Libya, fires were started by British bombs, merging in one huge blaze visible 70 miles away and "accompanied by violent explosions," the R. A. F. reported.

lar Soviet armies fought their greatest battles of the day.

Behind these fronts of clamor and chaos, back in the cities and villages, volunteer "peoples' armies" sprang up to defend the old, vast Russian homeland as their obscure ancestors had done against the Poles in the middle ages and against Napoleon in the nineteenth century.

Thousands of laborers and former capitalists, in Moscow, Leningrad and elsewhere rose in arms in response to the appeal of Premier Josef Stalin, who ordered them to sear and lay bare the limitless countryside with fire and dynamite if the Nazis make a general break-through.

The gravity of the Russian situation was suggested by the observation of informed military quarters in London that Russia could lose the war or lay the foundations for possible eventual German defeat in the next 48 hours.

If the Germans are given time to consolidate their gains and launch more intensive drives on Leningrad, Kiev and Moscow the Soviet will lose "these cities within a week and maybe less," these sources said.

The Russians, however, have a "long chance," and this would be to attack immediately with every tank and airplane at hand the spearheads of the German offensives, it was added.

Stalin had told the people that there was "grave danger," and these were his orders:

"In case of a forced retreat of Red army units, all rolling stock must be evacuated; the enemy must not be left a single engine, a single railway car, not a single pound of grain or a gallon of fuel.

"Collective farmers must drive off all their cattle and turn over their grain to the safe-keeping of state authorities for transportation to the rear. All valuable property, including nonferrous metals, grain and fuel which cannot be withdrawn must without fail be destroyed.

"In areas occupied by the enemy, guerilla units, mounted and foot, must be formed; diversionist groups must be organized to combat enemy troops, to foment guerilla warfare everywhere, to blow up bridges, damage telephone and telegraph lines and to set fire to forests, stores and transports.

"In occupied regions conditions must be made unbearable for the enemy and all his accomplices. They must be hounded and annihilated at every step and all their measures frustrated.'

The Soviet command's day communique dealt almost wholly with the German thrusts at the Berezina (there were unofficial reports in Berlin that it had been crossed, but such a crossing had not been claimed by the German high command itself) in the region of Borisov and in the Polish sector toward Shepatovka, 20 miles within the Ukraine on the road to Kiev.

In the sector of Borisov, 50 miles northeast of Minsk, the communique declared Russian counterattacks had frustrated every German attempt to cross the river. Here it was that Napoleon's army retreating from Moscow was trapped by Russian destruction of a bridge.

To the south, German troops advancing toward Shepetovka suffered heavy losses, it was added, and when blocked, turned south in an effort to break through toward Tarnopol, which lies east of Lwow and south of Luck in the Ukraine's Polish buffer area.

Storm Raised as Army Asks Right to Use Troops Abroad

ean "interests are imperilled" and that a "grave national emergency exists."

Recent events, he said, presumably the battle of Crete and the Russian-Nazi war, are "convincing proof" of the "suddenness with which armed conflict can spread to areas hitherto considered free from attack."

Therefore, Marshall argued, legal restrictions "on the use of the armed forces" should be removed "without delay." These, written into the Selective Service Act and National Guard mobilization measure a year ago, restrict their service to the Western Hemisphere and American possessions and their tenure in uniform to one year unless Congress declares the "national security is threatened."

These restrictions, he said, "hamstring the development of the Army into a force immediately available for whatever defensive measures may be necessary."

The chief of staff pointed out that large numbers of the Reserve officers holding command posts in Army units will soon be due to go home under present law, and that selectees and Guardsmen are in the same situation. He emphasized that the Army must be ready for "every conceivable contingency."

Use a Military Problem

"When and where these forces are to serve," Marshall stated, "are questions to be determined by their Commander-in-Chief and the Congress, and should not be confused with the problem of their readiness for service."

Under present conditions, he declared, the Army cannot properly prepare itself for any emergency. Plans to this end must be submitted to the "time-consuming business of public investigation and debate—along with the advertisement of such plans to the world at large."

"I submit," he added, "that the limitations referred to should be removed as quickly as possible if we are to have a fair opportunity to project ourselves against the coldly calculated, secret and sudden action that might be directed against us."

Marshall said that in asking authority to keep selectees and reserve officers in service beyond the present authorized 12-month period, it is not intended to retain all of them.

"It is the purpose of the War Department to proceed with the military training of annual increments of selectees, replacing those now in active service as soon as the situation permits, especially the older men," he declared.

A similar policy applies to Reserve officers only half of whom are now in active service, he said, adding:

"However, a fixed rule cannot be applied at this time, in our opinion. Some are in Hawaii, some in the Aleutian Islands, others in units to be dispatched to overseas bases, and still others are in organizations to be trained as 'task forces' for possible special operations."

Marshall added that quantity production of new arms is now going forward and the "next four months should greatly improve the situation."

First Congressional comments on the War Department recommendations followed familiar lines, but there were indications that isolationists would be joined by some legislators normally sympathetic to Administration defense and foreign policies.

Schwartz Is Opposed

From Senator Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming, for instance, came the comment that "selectees went into the Army with the understanding that they would be released after a year. I don't believe the present emergency is a sufficient one to keep them in."

Senator Herring, of Iowa, another Democrat who has backed most of the Administration's foreign and defense policy proposals, said retention of the selectees would amount to "changing the rules after the game has started."

Emphatic opposition to the proposals was expressed by Senators Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and Johnson (Republican), of California.

Among the legislators supporting Gen. Marshall's recommendations were Senators Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, majority whip; Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; Caraway (Democrat), of Arkansas, and Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, ranking majority member of the Military Affairs Committee.

Thomas said: "As it is now, the Regular Army is under one set of laws, the National Guard is under another and the selectees under still a third. Gen. Marshall is recommending that all component units of the Army be put under a more uniform law."

"People who object to this," Mrs. Caraway said, "just don't realize what is likely to happen to us. We are all-out, anyway, and we ought to go the whole length, it seems to me."

Fierce Aerial Duels Fought Over Helsinki

Stockholm (Friday), July 4 (AP).—Fierce aerial duels over Finland's capital of Helsinki between Soviet and defense planes were reported in dispatches reaching here today.

The Russians have attacked the capital six times in the past 24 hours, these accounts said.

A heavy Finnish artillery barrage lifted toward the Soviet military base of Hango apparently was the forerunner of a large-scale Finnish attempt to take that base leased by the Russians under the 1940 peace terms.

ports, would eventually be taken over by the Japanese government because the costs of unloading and reloading would triple freight rates, causing some consignees not to claim the cargoes in Japan.

Cargo Discharged

The advices from Kobe said the Kyusyu Maru had been halted at that Japanese port and the cargo discharged there "at the risk and expense of the owners of the shipments."

Officials of the Tabacalera Co., local agents for the vessel, said no reason was given for the action. They said the ship was carrying materials essential to the national defense program.

Reliable sources said that the Japanese merchantman Nozima Maru, now anchored in Manila Bay, would be ordered to unload its cargo of 6,000 tons of chrome ore consigned to the United States and then sail to its home port.

Philippine shippers fear trade between the United States and the Philippines will be practically halted if all the Japanese ships are requisitioned by the Tokyo government.

Nippon Line Denies Order to Stop Service

In New York, officials of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Line said they had received no orders to halt their shipping service.

N. Y. K. said the Japanese government had requisitioned about 50 of their ships since the war with China started and that two more were taken last week.

The firm said many company freighters had been withdrawn from Atlantic service recently because of the lack of business brought about by Government restrictions on shipments of defense materials to Japan.

In San Francisco the manager of the Nyk Line, largest Japanese shipping company operating on the West Coast, said the Japanese requisitioning orders did not apply to that line.

In Washington, Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, said the State Department had received reports that several Japanese vessels, en route from Manila to San Francisco, had been requisitioned by the Japanese government, and the cargoes, understood to consist of chrome, landed in Japanese ports.

Brown Revamping Detective Bureau

Admits It Is Force's 'Weakest Link'; Police Head Discloses Plans to Quit

want to put new men on new jobs."

At least four-crack sleuths, Brown admitted, are now in the uniformed division when they should be in the detective bureau where the District would get maximum value from their abilities.

Two of these, Sergts. Robert Murray and Richard McCarty, left the detective bureau at a $300 yearly reduction in salary, Brown said, simply because they could not stand excessively long detective bureau hours.

Two others, Capt. Floyd Truscott and Lieut. Robert Barrett, left the bureau because, Brown declared, there was no other way, under existing law, to give them the promotions they deserved.

Barrett, Murray and McCarthy are scheduled to testify when the investigation is resumed Monday at 10 a. m.

Brown also had praise for Inspector Edward J. Kelly, frequently mentioned as likely to be the next superintendent. Brown called him an "outstanding criminal investigator."

At the time Inspector Thompson was appointed chief of detectives, Brown said, two men were under consideration for the job. One was Kelly, but he told Brown, declared the major, that in his years in the detective bureau he had "enough trouble for one man" and wanted to transfer to the uniformed division.

Brown's appraisal of Capt. Harvey G. Callahan was less favorable, though he insisted he had nothing against the commander of the First Precinct and that he is "an excellent police officer." His estimate of Truscott also was qualified.

Both Callahan and Truscott created a sensation at earlier investigation sessions with charges that a "Gestapo" operates within the department and that the detective bureau is torn with petty jealousies.

"Would Callahan make a good investigator?" Representative Hebert asked.

"Capt. Callahan has had no experience as an investigator," was Brown's reply.

"How about Capt. Truscott?"

Youth a Drawback

"I think Capt. Truscott is a very good investigator, but as for his administrative ability, he is very young. I think he would not make a good administrator."

"After his graduation from the Federal Bureau of Investigation school I put Capt. Callahan in charge of a downtown precinct," Brown continued. "After checking records of his precinct, it seemed to me that with his training he was not getting the results in felony cases that he should have gotten."

Hartman Is Indignant

Maj. Brown was a well-poised, solemn-faced witness. Acting Capt. Hartman talked like a man whose pent-up indignation has been rising for days. He lashed out at his accusers, shouted and pounded the hearing table for emphasis.

"Gentlemen," he began, "I was amazed when I returned from a short vacation and heard of the things related here by Capt. Truscott and Capt. Callahan. I have two things that I am proud of—courage and ingenuity, though it may be that sometimes I am a little short on ingenuity.

Hartman said that when he first went on the special investigations squad, it was in charge of Capt. Truscott and that its assignment was to clean up gambling in the District and to investigate graft within the Police Department.

He snorted with indignation in denying that the squad is a "Gestapo." He said it is "incredible" that it should be charged that he would "snoop" on a fellow officer.

"I would turn in my resignation before I would do that," he shouted.

Hartman outlined the squad's duties—enforcement of gambling laws and Alcohol Beverage Control Board regulations, investigations of un-American activities in conjunction with the FBI and inquiries for Selective Service boards and for Maj. Brown and the Commissioners.

Aid Investigate Police

Late in 1938, he said, he was placed in charge of the squad and about that time the Commissioners received complaints that two members of the police force were associated with gamblers. As a result of the squad's investigation of the policemen they were dismissed from the force, he related.

"Then you did investigate the police," broke in Hebert.

"Yes, and so did everyone on the squad."

"I have been sitting here for ten minutes trying to get you to tell me that you have investigated members of the department," Hebert declared. "You could have saved a lot of time if you had answered right off. You admit you investigated policemen?"

"Yes."

"Have any of your men caused a promotion to be delayed or revoked?"

"No!"

"Have you ever caused a man to be transferred from one station to another?"

"No!"

During his turn on the stand, Maj. Brown insisted that only once was Hartman given instructions to investigate policemen and that was when a complaint was received that two men in the detective bureau were visiting gambling houses.

"This squad," said the major, "was named in secrecy to investigate gambling so that there would be no leak to the underworld. Despite our efforts, the numbers men finally learned the identity of our men.

"In connection with this gambling investigation, we got word that two men were visiting gambling houses. We got one member of the squad in this house as an employe. While he was there, he heard one of the attendants say that the reason the place never was raided was because they paid protection. Police officers were named by this man. This is the only place where we investigated police officers."

Brown said members of the squad were instructed to make daily written reports. Two squadsmen, he said, inserted in their reports the fact that they had observed two policemen in as many gambling places under surveillance of undercover operators. Both reports were turned over to him by Hartman, but Brown emphasized that disclosures about the policemen were incidental to the gambling investigation.

In one instance, a report on a private has been turned over to his captain and the case is still pending, Brown said. In the other instance, the officer in question admitted being in the place but denied he knew there was gambling there. The man has been on the force for 25 years, Brown said, and has been transferred.

Hartman was asked by Hebert if he denied "there is any such thing as a Gestapo."

"Yes."

"You have never heard of a Gestapo?"

"Yes, everybody has."

"How do these rumors get out?"

"Probably because of the activities of the squad."

Hartman named former Detective Sergts. H. E. Brodie and Leo Murray as policemen who were under surveillance of the squad.

"Outside of these officers, have you investigated others?" asked Hebert.

Just a few."

"The practice is not very widespread?"

"No. It would be very demoralizing."

"It seems already to have been."

"That is most unfortunate."

"You admit that these rumors (of a Gestapo) are rampant?"

"I do not . . . No man has been given lousier assignments than I have been given. Not long ago I was told it would not be so long before my demise. I learned humility a long time ago and I am here to do my best . . . Under the most adverse of circumstances we have succeeded.

Praises His Superiors

"No public officials have tried harder than Commissioner Hazen and Major Brown. Their service probably will never be duplicated. Major Brown is a man of great courage . . . Why should I be subjected to these accusations that are the product of jealousy . . . I forgive those men (Callahan and Truscott) for they know not what they do.

"I am not delving into what someone else is doing I am too busy with my own affairs. I apologize to no man for the results of my organization. I have praise for my men . . . I feel like a guinea pig today."

When Maj. Brown was on the stand, Hebert asked if he had an "organization, popularly called Gestapo, to spy on fellow officers." Brown's reply was "absolutely not." The statements of Truscott and Callahan, Brown said, are "based on idle rumor and gossip."

Representative Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin, asked Hartman about a "notorious" downtown gambling place. Hartman replied that he had heard of the place, sent an officer to investigate but had been unable to uncover evidence to justify a raid.

Gets Few Convictions

He told Sauthoff that in the last fiscal year his men made 1,100 gambling arrests but that there were "very few" convictions. He denied that the numbers racket still flourishes in Washington or that there are any "big shot" gamblers here.

Hartman declared that he, as well as others who have testified, is the victim of Detective Bureau jealousies. He said he once got an efficiency rating so low that even if he had got 100 in the examination, which counts half for promotion, he still could not have been advanced.

"I never discussed my treatment with Maj. Brown until it was all over," he said. "I didn't want to squawk. I don't want to squawk about anything. I just took another examination. I didn't quit."

"You didn't go out on a limb," Hebert interjected.

"You ought to be a policeman. . . . The reason I am in the position I am in today is because I didn't talk to any one. I keep my own records and I fraternize with no one. . . . The thing I can't understand is that my integrity has not been attacked here. . . . You have treated me royally."

Hebert quizzed Brown closely on the Strieff murder investigation. He charged that all important information on the case was dug up first by outsiders, principally newspaper reporters. He also declared that the police waited six hours after hearing of the girl's disappearance before they went to work on the case. Hebert said Private Edwin Grayson received the first report.

Sees Neglect of Duty

"There is no reason why the investigation should not have been started at once," Brown said. "I would not say that was an instance of bungling but I would say that the officer was neglecting his duty . . . You might say that the Police Department is under indictment in the Strieff case."

Aside from this and the Abramowitz and Dr. Simon murders, the department's record is good, Brown said. He admitted that in none of these cases do the police have definite leads.

Brown said, "That was bad police work," when told by Hebert that a man who saw Jessie Elizabeth Strieff two days before she was found murdered has yet to be questioned by detectives.

Commenting on charges made during Wednesday's hearing that the Commissioners sometimes reverse or mitigate disciplinary recommendations by the Police Trial Board, Sauthoff told Brown he should ask for authority to enforce board decisions himself. He said:

"It would seem to me that an efficient police department would depend upon a superintendent of police who is the boss and who has no one going over his head."

Brown told the subcommittee that he came to the department as a private January 10, 1906, and that he was named chief—though he did not seek the job—October 22, 1932. His retirement statement to The Post follows:

"I have contemplated retiring ever since I became eligible. Several years ago one of the Commissioners told me he would block any attempt of mine to retire. Another asked me to hold my post as long as he was Commissioner. I have done that."

(Commmissioner John Russell Young yesterday declared that while Maj. Brown would not be asked to retire, his application for retirement would be accepted if proffered.)

"Last winter, when I was in Florida, I saw many of my friends enjoying their old age, and I decided then I would not spend another winter in the Police Department. . . .

"I've worked hard for 45 years in the department and have held every job in the business. Since being made superintendent, I have been out almost every night and hardly ever get a chance for a vacation. A man can go so far, and I think I need a rest."

Brown, it was expected, would not quit before August 18, when his term expires as president of the International Association of Police Chiefs.

DOUBLE TROUBLE—It wasn't a fly in the ointment, but a girl hitch-hiker in the milk that striking dairymen discovered yesterday at Walton, N. Y., when they dumped cans from a truck. At the same time, State police arrived, arrested a picketer (extreme right) and placed the situation well in hand

By the Associated Press

Utica, N. Y., July 3.—In the wake of milk strike incidents which saw one man killed, Owen D. Young, retired industrialist, tonight invited representatives of milk producer organizations to discuss a "unified plan of action" in the current emergency.

Young invited the Dairy Farmers Union, whose three-State blockade, leaders say, has now halved New York City's daily 3,000,000-quart milk supply, and other dairymen's organizations to meet with him in Van Hornesville Saturday afternoon to confer on the situation.

Young, who is withholding milk produced on his farm from the huge metropolitan New York market along with union members and supporters, previously had proposed a temporary Federal mediation board to determine a fair price for farmers. The union seeks a uniform price of $3 compared with an estimated $2.15 per hundredweight (47 quarts) for July.

Today's strike incidents saw two tank-truck convoys fired upon, several arrests and the death of Deputy Sheriff Ray Russell, of Monkton, Vt., who was crushed under the wheels of a milk truck on which he was riding and from which dairymen sought to dump milk.

From Joseph O. Eastlack, secretary of the New York Metropolitan Milk Distributors Bargaining Agency, came an estimate of 2,000,000 quarts withheld during the day.

Dr. John L. Rice, city health commissioner, however, estimated the figure at 3,000,000 quarts.

Young, Seeking Best Police For D. C., Paved Way for Probe

Commissioner John Russell Young is determined to give Washington in his own words—"the best police force money can buy."

The "baby member" of the Board of District Commissioners had hardly been in office a full year before he focused a critical eye on the Metropolitan Police Department and decided there was room for improvement.

He interested his associates on the board in a municipal inquiry and was prepared to proceed when the local crime situation attracted attention on Capitol Hill and the current House investigation was started.

In deference to the Congressional probe, Young and the other two Commissioners agreed to postpone action and designated a three-man committee to "sit in" on the present hearing to absorb a background for the municipal investigation.

Young Set Stage

Young and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen have attended each session of the Schulte committee. It has been Young, however, who has goaded high-ranking police officials to "tell all" with promises of protection from possible reprisals.

At least two months ago, Young began "backstage" discussions of the local police setup with various District officials, paving the way for a "top to bottom" probe.

He instigated the Commissioners' request for medical reports on all members of the force over 55 in May and announced at the time that it was planned to "weed out the deadwood."

Commenting yesterday on progress of the Congressional hearing, Young declared:

"We want the truth and individual opinions of ranking police officers. I think we are getting both and I am gratified with developments."

Thus far, Young added, testimony before the House committee has substantiated long-standing reports of "jealousy, rivalry and discord" within the Police Department.

"These are troubles we want to eliminate," the Commissioner declared, "and when all the facts are presented we intend to remedy what has long been a bad situation."

Young said that "by no means" would the contemplated municipal investigation be shelved when testimony before the House group is completed.

"For the Schulte committee as a basis for our own inquiry," he declared, emphasizing the Commissioners would exert their powers to improve police efficiency.

In line with this, Young said he thought inclusion in the District appropriation bill of an item providing four "ace" investigators for the Police Department, each at a captain's pay ($3,600 a year) "was a step in the right direction."

"In fact," said Young, "I am so much in favor of this that I intend to ask for four more such investigators in next year's budget."

Young said he would continue to urge ranking police officers to tell all they know about inner workings of the department.

"I will do my best, as a member of the Board of Commissioners, to see that they are fully protected and free to speak their minds," Young asserted.

Young came to the Municipal Government as a newspaperman. He has had wide experience in local affairs and since his appointment has evidenced in many ways a determination to "pull no punches."

The Commissioners' special investigation committee "sitting in" on the Congressional hearing includes Maj. Beverly C. Snow, assistant engineer commissioner, chairman; Walter Fowler, District budget officer, and Maj. James Lusby, disbursing officer.

After the Congressional probe is finished, this special committee will launch its own inquiry and is under instructions to make recommendations directly to the Commissioners.

Two Major Strike Threats Diminishing

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The two major clouds on the defense labor horizon appeared to have been blown away yesterday. It was indicated that agreement was near in the long-standing soft coal dispute and that the Defense Mediation Board announced a mid-West ammunition plant, faced with probable Government occupation, was about to resume bargaining with a union which threatened a strike for Sunday night.

Hopeful indications in the coal controversy followed meetings yesterday between representatives of southern mines and John L. Lewis, president of the C. I. O. United Mine Workers. Meetings were to continue this morning. It was believed that a contract might be signed before noon.

Unless an agreement is reached before July 8, some 150,000 union miners in southern Appalachian fields will not return to their jobs from their present five-day vacation period, ending Monday. The strike call was issued after operators of mines in Harlan County, Ky., refused to sign a two-year contract offered by Lewis. Yesterday's meetings were believed to indicate that other southern owners had prevailed upon the Harlan group to join the agreement.

In the ammunition plant dispute, involving 550 workers in the smokeless powder division of the Western Cartridge Co., Alton, Ill., the company responded to a deadline set for 5 p. m. yesterday by notifying Mediation Board Chairman William H. Davis that it would bargain with an A. F. of L. Chemical Workers Union local.

In a letter to Davis, the company vice president, John M. Olin, said his concern would not waive rights to appeal a decision of the National Labor Relations Board, which certified the local, but if this waiver was not demanded, the company would be willing to bargain.

Davis replied that the board expressed no opinion whether by such bargaining the company "waives or retains any supposed legal rights to a court of review" of the NLRB order. He suggested that company and union officials meet tomorrow morning.

For the avowed purpose of knitting labor's efforts more closely to the defense program, A. F. of L. President William Green yesterday announced the appointment of a seven-man National Defense Committee, comprised of important A. F. of L leaders, and called on central labor unions in 795 leading cities to appoint similar committees to work locally.

Among the functions of the central and local committees, he added, would be the providing of adequate labor supply for defense industries, the dissemination of information on defense contracts to help workers in smaller communities obtain continuous employment, the promotion of union cooperation with the U. S. Employment Service in training workers for defense jobs and "cooperation of labor with the Government so effective as to destroy all pressure for compulsory service."

Assault Case to Go To Jury Monday

District Attorney Edward M. Curran yesterday announced that assault charges against James R. McKenzie, 21, colored, will be presented to the grand jury Monday.

McKenzie is accused of attacking Mrs. Vada Abarca, 26, in a Fourteenth Street cleaning agency. Curran plans to interview witnesses in the case Saturday. He said that if an indictment were returned the case would be set down for trial promptly, even if other cases had to be displaced.

Progress Sharing Plan Set Up To Benefit Post Employes

The Washington Post, in a "Statement of Policy" issued July 2, 1941, announced a "Progress Sharing Plan" under which two-thirds of any net improvement in the financial result of the paper's operation for the year 1941 as compared with 1940 will be paid out to eligible employes as additional compensation for services by them during 1941.

All regular full-time wage earners and salaried employes continuously employed during the entire six months' period ending December 31, 1941, will participate in the plan, except the managing editor, associate editor, comptroller, treasurer, advertising director and production manager.

The amount distributable to eligible employes will be divided into two equal parts. One part will be distributed among eligible employes on a per capita basis giving consideration to length of service during 1941. The other part will be distributed among eligible employes on the basis of their individual basic wage or salary earnings during 1941.

The plan is an experiment and applies only to the year 1941 but if successful, this or some similar arrangement may be made effective for the year 1942.

Many wreaths arrived at the embassy last night, including one from Robert Woods Bliss, former American envoy to Argentina and chairman of the Washington committee which had planned a festival to honor the fiftieth anniversary of his first arrival in America.

Earlier in the day, services for the pianist were held in St. Patrick's Cathedral at New York, where Archbishop Francis J. Spellman said that Paderewski would plead before God in heaven for the freedom of Poland. A military guard of honor of the New York Military Police Battalion and an Army band, together with Polish veteran organizations, marched to the train with the body.

Adm. Beauregard Named Naval Attache at Rio

The Navy yesterday assigned Rear Admiral Augustin T. Beauregard as Naval Attache at the American Embassy in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Secretary Knox, in announcing the detail, declared that the assignment of an officer of such high rank to the post "indicates the advances being made in the Good Neighbor policy and the increasing importance of hemisphere defense."

Admiral Beauregard is considered one of the Navy's outstanding authorities on South American affairs. A native of San Antonio, Tex., he was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1906, and recently was chief of the American Naval Mission to Brazil.

U. S. Offers Monthly Tax Payment Plan

In order to soften the blow of the stiffest tax program in the Nation's history, Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, announced yesterday that individual and corporate taxpayers will be offered means of paying their taxes on what amounts to a monthly installment plan.

As a reward for their foresight and promptness, taxpayers who adopt the method, which is based on periodical purchase of a new type of securities, will receive interest ranging from 1.92 per cent to 0.48 per cent annually on amounts they set aside in advance for their payments. Beginning August 1, the Treasury will offer through 18,000 banks the new securities, which have been designated series A and B tax anticipation notes.

The series A notes, designed for the small taxpayer, will be available in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, and no more than $1,200 of this series can be purchased in any one tax year by any one taxpayer. These notes will provide a return of about 1.92 per cent annually.

Notes of Series B will be available in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000, 10,000 and $100,000. This series, ostensibly for corporations and large individual income taxpayers, provides a return of 0.48 per cent a year.

Excess-profits taxes are also payable in Series A and B notes, but not excise or so-called "nuisance" taxes.

Morgenthau said the tax-anticipation plan will be completed by the time Congress passes the Revenue Act of 1941, providing for an additional $3,500,000,000 of new taxes.

"We wanted to make it as easy as possible for the taxpayers to have the money ready next year," he told his press conference.

"We feel that this plan which we have worked out will be a convenience to the taxpayers to save the money each month out of income or earnings to meet next year's taxes."

The plan also will permit the Treasury to reduce its borrowing operations.

Roosevelt Hits Ban On FSA Employes

Signs $1,041,444,529 Bill Asking Repeal of Anticivil Service Rider

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 3.—President Roosevelt signed a $1,041,444,529 deficiency appropriation bill today, but reluctantly, because it carried a provision forbidding extension of civil service to the Farm Security Administration.

"It is my earnest hope," Mr. Roosevelt said in a statement, "that Congress will take prompt action to repeal this rider so as to make it possible to extend civil service after appropriate examinations to employes of the Farm Security Administration at the earliest possible opportunity."

The President's statement follows;

"The second Deficiency Appropriation Act (H. R. 5166) contains a provision to which I am unalterably opposed. This is the paragraph which reads as follows:

'No part of the appropriations contained in the Department of Agriculture Appropriation Act, 1942, under the heading 'loans, grants and rural rehabilitation,' shall be available to pay the compensation of any person appointed in accordance with the Civil Service laws.'

Lists Effects of Ban

"This will have the effect of preventing use of the Civil Service system in connection with the employment of the bulk of the employes of the Farm Security Administration, Department of Agriculture. It will have the effect of prohibiting recruiting from Civil Service registers. It will prevent bringing in after non-competitive examinations of persons now employed in the Farm Security Administration and it will prevent application of the retirement act and other Civil Service laws to a devoted body of public servants.

"In signing Executive Order No. 8743 extending the classified Civil Service pursuant to authority vested in me by the Ramspeck Act, I said:

"'During my years in office, I have signed a number of executive orders extending the classified civil service. Three years ago I went as far as it was legally possible to go at that time by covering into civil service all positions not definitely excluded by statute and not policy determining in character. I could not cover in numerous positions which had been exempted from civil service by specific congressional enactments.

"'In the last year, however, two events of profound significance in terms of improvement in Government have occurred. The Congress last November passed the Ramspeck Act, which removed numerous prohibitions against extending civil service to thousands of positions. It is under the authority of this act that today's order is issued. In February, "the President's Committee on Civil Service Improvement," which I appointed two years ago, with Mr. Justice Reed as chairman, made its final report to me. I have previously transmitted this report to Congress by special message. In substance this executive order accepts and, indeed, implements the recommendations of that committee."

Position Unchanged

"In that statement I also said:

"'For the first time in the history of this Government the greatest possible opportunities are now open for the development of a broad merit system which will further encourage men and women of outstanding ability to enter the Government under conditions which will offer them fair and equal opportunities to build satisfactory careers.

"'The requirements of today and those of the future are so great that the services of the best minds in the Nation must be secured if governmental affairs are to be conducted in the manner demanded by modern conditions and at the high level of ability which a democratic government owes to the people of the United States.'

"My position is unchanged. I believe that the position of most members of Congress in supporting the Ramspeck Act is unchanged.

"Representations that the cost of administering the Farm Security Administration as a result of bringing its employes under civil service will be increased are untrue: indeed, the cost to the people of the United States both in terms of dollars and cents and in terms of the quality of service will be infinitely greater unless it is brought under civil service.

"It is my earnest hope that Congress will take prompt action to repeal this rider so as to make it possible to extend civil service after appropriate examinations to employes of the Farm Security Administration at the earliest possible opportunity. My position in this is clear. At this time when the load of this Government is greater than at any time in its history, it is of the utmost importance that we shut out all considerations of caprice or favoritism or worse in the selection of the Government's workers in the interest of better Government service.

Radio to Carry Roosevelt Talk To World Today

By Frank L. Kluckhohn

Copyright by New York Times

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 3.—President Roosevelt worked today upon the speech he is to deliver at 5 p. m. (E.S.T.) tomorrow in connection with the Nation-wide Independence Day celebration, and William D. Hassett, White House secretary, said it would be reasonable to assume that international affairs would be touched upon.

The State Department has arranged to have the President's speech and the connected national Fourth of July demonstration broadcast by short wave to Europe and, in foreign languages, to much of the world, including Latin America.

Hassett cautioned, however, that the oration, scheduled immediately to precede the playing in unison by bands all over the country of the National Anthem and the repeating of the oath of allegiance by 130,000,000 Americans, probably would not be of "tremendous" importance.

The belief was that the Executive, while pointing out the dangers to America inherent in the present world situation, would devote himself to emphasizing national unity All indications here are that no major move in the world situation is contemplated unless the Germans defeat Russia and turn to a campaign in the Atlantic, or unless the Far Eastern situation shifts drastically.

Mr. Roosevelt today, for instance, refused to comment on the recommendation by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, to Secretary of War Stimson that legislation be passed to permit service by all American troops, National Guard and selectees as well as units of the Regular Army, anywhere in the world. It has been persistently reported, but never officially confirmed, that at least three plans exist for protecting by armed action the American position in the Atlantic in case the Germans start a major campaign looking toward controlling this "avenue of attack."

There were no signs at Hyde Park, which the President has given no indications as yet of leaving, that any great activities are proceeding with regard to providing American aid for the Soviet Union. Harry L. Hopkins, lease-lend supervisor, who was expected here last Saturday, has remained on Long Island.

Married Man's Sex Changing, Plea Reveals

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 3.—Edward P. Richards, 29, who asks legal permission to change his name to Barbara Ann because of a pronounced sex change, disclosed today that he and Miss Lorraine Wilcox, 32, were married last November.

Dressed in contrasting frocks, the two received newspaper reporters in their modest apartment.

There they told how they had fallen in love at first sight while guests at the home of a mutual friend, of their elopement to Yuma, Ariz., where they were married November 18, and of their decision to remain living together after Richards' changing physical characteristics had become known to his bride.

"We were married at a church ceremony," said dark-haired Miss Wilcox as Richards, his blond hair curled in feminine coiffure and his fingernails tinted, gazed demurely at the floor.

Wife Feels Sympathy

"Well," continued Miss Wilcox, "you can understand that I was shocked at the discovery I made soon after we were married. But instead of anger, or bitterness, it was sympathy that I felt.

"I realized that it was not possible for her to be my "husband" or to go on living as a man, especially since the sex changes became more pronounced.

"We talked things over. Edward became Barbara. And she—I never again could think of her as 'him'—began to wear women's clothing, very becomingly, too, and to live, think, act like a woman.

"I instigated the legal procedure under which Barbara is to become, we hope, a woman by court order."

Richards, who said he was born April 1, 1912, in Essex County, Mass., filed a court petition yesterday setting forth that his heretofore predominantly male characteristics were changing into those of a woman and asked legal authority to change his name to Barbara Ann.

Registered for Draft

Richards said he registred for the last census as a woman but as a male for Selective Service, being placed in class 4-F.

Miss Wilcox said she still had a profound affection for Richards, adding:

"It is not, of course, the kind of love a woman has for a man, but it is a very deep feeling, the sort of feeling that makes me want to do what I can for her in every way."

Miss Wilcox said she hopes the court proceedings Richards has instituted would pave the way for an annulment.

"We will go on living together, at least for the time being. Why not? We are perfect friends, have identical tastes, and find joy in each other's company."

Prefers to Be Feminine

Richards, whose case is being studied by the American Medical Association, was asked whether, if it were found possible for him to be restored to masculinity, he would wish to have such a change brought about.

"No," he said emphatically. "I like being a woman. I've been told that there is no possibility of me becoming a man again, but even if there were, I shouldn't wish it. Femininity seems to have been my destiny."

He said he noticed the start of the sex change a couple of years ago.

U. S. Morale Is Poor, Says Dr. Menninger

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., July 3.—National morale in the present emergency was weighed by one of the Nation's prominent psychiatrists today at the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs and found wanting.

Dr. Karl L. Menninger, of Topeka, Kans., president of the American Psychoanalytic Association, defining civilian morale as "the maintenance of what we like to regard as the normal spirit of optimism, courage, single-mindedness as to national aims, loyalty to the Government, to the cause espoused by the Government and to the allies of the Government" found it wanting in "the confused aims incident to the Selective Service and its administration."

"There is certainly a diversity of attitudes toward Army enlistment," he declared. "It seems to be an unsettled question whether enlistment should be considered as primarily an opportunity for expressing unrestrained belligerency and brutality in a good cause; a privilege for the obtaining of vocational training, and companionship; an unpleasant patriotic obligation to be evaded if honorably possible; a course of discipline and treatment for reckless, wayward, spineless, unadjusted young male adults; or a course of punishment for recalcitrant individuals who need a firm hand."

On the negative side of the morale picture, Dr. Menninger pointed to fear, panic, pessimism, discouragement, suspiciousness, disgruntlement and resentment.

"From the psychiatric standpoint," he said, "this can be described as an inappropriate diversion or deflection to the Nation itself of some of the aggression which should be directed against the enemy and the threat of danger.

"This phenomenon of substituting someone we love for the infliction of hate felt but not expressed toward someone else is very familiar to psychiatrists. In individuals it is called neurotic; in a nation it is called disturbed morale."

New Anti-Panzer Division Created With More Fire Power

A fast, new, experimental division, combining the swift, hard-hitting ability of mechanized units with the all-around fighting and staying qualities of the infantry, was created yesterday by the War Department.

Organization of this latest answer to the present battlefield domination by panzer troops was disclosed coincidentally with the announcement of the formation of 22 heavily armed antitank battalions.

The new type division, officially described as a "radical" cross of the present armored and infantry divisions, will have 50 per cent more fire power than the present Fourth Motorized Infantry Division, from which it will be formed.

More Fire Power

Completely motorized, it will contain 106 light and medium tanks and quantities of new "tank killers"—75-millimeter howitzers on a self-propelled, track-layout mount. These tank destroyers, capable of moving faster than armored vehicles and going into action instantly, will have an increased number of conventional 75- and 37-millimeter antitank guns over those normally supplied to a division.

The new division will be thoroughly tested in large-scale war games to be held in North and South Carolina in November. Although full quotas of new weapons and equipment will not be on hand then, enough of them will be available for test purposes, the War Department said.

The man power of the new unit will be less than that of the existing Fourth Division—14,000 instead of 15,550 men—but the number of officers will remain the same, about 600. It will have a large increase in its reconnaissance force, enabling it to provide strong combat patrols over a wide front.

Extra Artillery

An innovation will be that infantry regiments will carry their own artillery — powerful 75-millimeter howitzers—in addition to the division artillery.

In forming the 22 new antitank battalions, the Army assigned 14 of them to existing triangular and square divisions, with the other eight being detailed to seven Army corps and an army. Ranging in size from 275 to 675 officers and men and employing both 37- and 75-millimeter guns, the units also will contain troops to set tank mines.

All in Convoy Carrying Marines Watched for Subs

A British Port, July 3 (AP).—Every man and woman aboard the ships in the convoy which brought United States Marines to Britain as a guard for the London Embassy kept a watch for German submarines during the long Atlantic voyage.

Soldiers, airmen, ferry pilots, nurses and civilians from the United States and Canada all shared the lookout.

"We slept by day and kept watch by night," one United States Marine related today. "Every man on our ship and on the others was on the alert for the slightest sign of German submarines."

Only one of the ships carrying the Marines, the 8,812-ton Dutch vessel Maasdam, was torpedoed and there was only one Marine casualty.

Marines on other ships said they were on watch the night the Maasdam was struck and saw the British naval escort pick up survivors and go after the raider without losing any time.

Sweden Sues Vultee Aircraft For Nondelivery

New York, July 3 (AP).—A suit for $11,445,517 plus the return of a $4,467,940 credit letter, was begun today in Federal Court by the Kingdom of Sweden against the Vultee Aircraft Corporation for nondelivery to Sweden of 144 Vultee model 48-C single engine pursuit planes and accoutrements contracted for.

The complaint stated that in February, 1940, in Jersey City, the latter plaintiff contracted with the Downey, Calif., firm for the purchase and delivery of the planes, and 15 additional Pratt & Whitney Twin Wasp, two-speed engines, 15 Hamilton hydromatic standard propellers and certain unspecified spare parts.

No deliveries were made, the complaint set forth, and last September 19 the plaintiffs were notified that the defendant could make no deliveries because the State Department had refused to license the planes and parts for export.

"How long have you been in Moscow?" Lyons asked him . . . "Two days," said Schroth . . . "How much longer do you plan to stay?" Lyons asked him . . . "Three more days," said Schroth . . . "And when," asked Lyons, "are you going to write that book?"*

The breach between Sol. Gen. Francis Biddle and J. Edgar Hoover was caused by the report that Jose Espinoza of the Department of Immigration would be named head of the FBI when Biddle is elevated to the Attorney-Generalship. Hoover, however, will remain in his present post . . . The sudden announcement that Danny Kaye would not return to "Lady in the Dark," but would be starred in Vinton Freedley's new musical, came as a surprise to Moss Hart—who had written the photographer-role in his show especially for Kaye. Moss didn't know about Kaye's decision until it was too late.

Artie Shaw, who received the "Down Beat" award for having the best swing-orchestra, is having a legal feud with the editors of Down Beat now, for having linked him with the American Peace Mobilization and the Harry Bridges Defense Committee. Shaw disassociated himself from both these groups many months ago . . . Those British-American ambulance drivers who were on the Zamzam and who still are being detained by the Nazis are discovering that there was a legal slip-up in their registrations with the Red Cross before they sailed. That's the technicality which keeps them from being released When Paul Draper and Hedi Vessler return from Rio, they will fulfill a promise to perform at a dance concert, with Carl Sandburg accompanying on the guitar.

One of the 26 men arrested last weekend in the Nazi spy round-up was Heinrich Carl Eilers, who had been the library steward on the S. S. Manhattan . . . Last summer there were many allegations published in the newspapers about the presence of Nazi sympathizers on the S. S. Manhattan . . . in the captain's quarters, when the cruiseship was nearing Havana, I asked the captain about these reports. "It isn't true," he assured. "There are only a few German-Americans working on this ship—and they're all loyal Americans. There's nothing German about them' . . . He then asked us if we wanted more coffee. We nodded, and he began to order it—by calling his personal steward: "Oh, Hans."

Although Ben Hecht no longer is writing a daily column for PM, he still writes a column a day privately—so that he'll have enough columns for his forthcoming book, "1001 Afternoons in N. Y." . . . The asking price for the Douglas Fairbanks interest in United Artists was $1,200,000—the taking price was $400,000 . . . Lean Fuld, the singer who makes those short-wave broadcasts to The Netherlands, has seen "Underground," the movie about anti-Nazi broadcasting, four times. Philip Dorn, the star of that movie, worked with Fuld in Amsterdam.

'Billy the Kid' Tops Ace Holiday Bill at Capitol

Robert Taylor, Well Supported, Is Effective In Title Role of an Excellent "Western;" "Three Cheers" Stage Revue Waves the Flag

"BILLY THE KID." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Walter Noble Burns' "Saga of Billy the Kid," adapted to the screen by Gene Fowler, starring Robert Taylor, with Brian Donlevy, Ian Hunter, Mary Howard, Gene Lockhart, Lon Chaney, jr., Henry O'Neill, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Sheriff Cy Andrews, Frank Conlan, Frank Puglia, Mitchell Lewis, Joe Yule, Eddie Dunn, Ethel Griffies, Chill Wills and others. Directed by David Miller. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

ROBERT TAYLOR

"BILLY THE KID," current on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, is the most rational of the de luxe "Westerns" that have come along of late. It is, paradoxically, as homicidal as any and more sentimental than most of the "bad man" biographies. Not so thunderous in its action as the typical rootin,' tootin,' shootin' gun opera, it is psychologically sound, competently acted and magnificently photographed against some of the Old West's most ruggedly picturesque backgrounds.

One of the most impressive qualities of this new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer melodrama is its inexorable insistence upon the triumph of law and order and its willingness to snuff out the life of a hard-headed young desperado who could not be won over to any law except the one laid down by his own six-gun. Stubborn as he was in his adherence to the justice of retributive murder, this hard-bitten young William Bonney, by the time of his demise, has achieved a high measure of sympathy that comes close to the border of admiration.

How accurate "Billy the Kid" is in its depiction of the life and character of its titular figure the historians will have to say. It is immaterial whether he drew with his left hand or his right, or whether he deemed a shot in the back justifiable under certain circumstances. The point is that he came to young manhood obsessed with the necessity of righting wrongs, including the murder of his father, that had embittered him and made him an outlaw at the age of 12. The better influences he encountered later were not quite enough to change his homicidal philosophy of living—and dying.

Taylor a Believable Kid

It is from this approach that Robert Taylor builds one of his better performances in the title role. His William Bonney is a pretty tough guy, with nerves as steady as his shooting irons. He casts his lot first with the renegades of the settlement—the cattle-rustlers, crooked gamblers and murderers. Brought under the influence of Eric Keating, a British rancher, who doesn't carry a gun; his sister and his foreman, a former boyhood chum, Billy is almost converted to the processes of orderly government when his erstwhile pals kill Keating and convince him that his law is best, after all. Five lives pay for Keating's—and then Billy pays with his own when Jim Sherwood "takes him in." Taylor does an A-1 job in this role, whether he was drafted for it or volunteered. So do the others in the leads—Brian Donlevy, as the foreman, commissioned as a deputy marshal; Ian Hunter, as the Englishman; Mary Howard, his sister, and Gene Lockhart, as the craven leader of the bandits. The surrounding cast are a pretty ominous lot.

"Billy the Kid" may be only half as volcanic as a majority of films of its type, but it is ten times as gorgeous to the eye. The Painted Desert locale was made to order for Technicolor, or vice versa. The picture is a panorama of sky and land effects that look like a succession of oil paintings. Perhaps the action was slowed down in deference to all this pictorial grandeur. It could be. And greatly to the mental and visual comfort of the spectator.

Room has been found during the orderly development of the story for an occasional dash of comedy, a bit of pathos and even some soft and plaintive music, all to accentuate Mr. Bonney's sentimental side. If Billy really was like that, it's too bad—for everybody but the Hays office—that Jim had to shoot him.

Red-White-and-Blue Revue

The "Three Cheers" stage revue at the Capitol this week is completely in the spirit of a star-spangled tribute to the temper of Independence Day. It reaches an inspiring climax in Bill Coyle's stirring microphoning of "Wave That Flag, America," the new patriotic song by Howard Acton and Phelps Adams, of the National Press Club, with a lusty ensemble lending zoom to a patriotic tableau that does not fall in a salute to President Roosevelt. Before that, however, the Ben Yost Singers, Joe Besser and Frank Little, in comic nonsense, and Johnny Burke have done their considerable bits on the side of rousing entertainment. Johnny Burke's familiar doughboy monologue has taken on new life. So apparently have the 16 Rhythm Rockets.

How D'ya Mean, Safe and Sane?

KATHERINE BOOTH AND JUNE PREISSER

two of Hollywood's most promising starlets, may be deeply imbued with the spirit of Independence Day, but it also looks as if they might be guests of honor at a huge blow-out any minute! With all those loose fireworks lying around? Better scram, kids, while you're still all together. Or is this all a July 4 publicity fake?

'Caught in the Draft,' Palace, Is Bob Hope at His Wittiest

By Richard L. Coe

That likable smart-aleck, Bob Hope, is at his witty best in "Caught in the Draft," a comedy of Army life that makes the Palace an oasis for the laugh-thirsty.

None of this stuff about being drafted for Hope. He's an enlisted man. True, he was caught in the shifting age tides of predraft legislation and he got fooled on the marriage problem. To marry or not to marry at the age of 32 perplexed him. To hire a sergeant to refuse him admission simply as proof to his girl he was ready and willing, if not able, seemed a smart, facile trick. But for the cartoon of Uncle Sam pointing a stern finger at him and saying "I Want You," Hope had his answer: "You've got me."

"Caught in the Draft," makes the most of Hope's disarming quality of being something less than noble. He plays, as ever, a smart talker with no desire to do anything admirable. In his role as a film star, he's quite comfortable, thanks; his agent, played by Lynne Overman, and his valet, by Eddie Bracken, decide to join up with their meal ticket. That's how the boys get together with their Uncle Sam.

But there is something that sets "Caught in the Draft" a couple of notches above the rush of recruits-in-the-raw films that is upon us. That is the Hope wisecracks. Nothing is sacred to the fellow. When first he catches sight of Dorothy Lamour strolling through the studio, where, as a film star, he is making a realistic World War I picture, he remarks: "My, that girl looks just like Dorothy Lamour without her sarong." There are those pleasant off-the-record remarks, quite apart from the script, which Hope tosses off the screen to his audience.

Playing the colonel's daughter to Hope's picture star-rookie, Dorothy Lamour is sleek as usual and a disarming foil for him as well.

Hope's associates on the masculine side are tip-top comics, too. There's the wry Lynne Overman to play his agent and unhappy Eddie Bracken to be the foggy-minded valet. Clarence Kolb and Paul Hurst are their militarily minded superiors.

If you think you're going to squeeze any more details on Hope's Army adventures out of this department, you're crazy. Surprise is of the essence in this parade of gags and wisecracks, slapstick and topical wit.

Also on the Palace screen is a new "Crime Does Not Pay" release, "Coffins on Wheels," depicting the destruction wrought on the roads by crooked second-hand car dealers. James FitzPatrick takes his color camera to the sweeping glories of Yosemite for a vacation suggesting traveltalk and the News of the Day completes the bill.

Time for Cheering!

Hollywood, Calif., July 3.—Here's another Fourth of July rolled around again. It makes you dizzy to think of all that's happened since the last one. Maybe it looks, at first glance, as if things weren't going so well with us, but we've been in tighter places than this and still kept the old Stars and Stripes waving. So how's about burying our differences and forgetting our troubles and cutting loose with a good old American cheer? Are you ready? Let's go!!

Calling on the super maestro, Cecil DeMille, is always an event, but reaching his set just as he's in the midst of a "hurricane" off Key West is something. I'd just settled down when we had some distinguished visitors, President Charles Seymour of Yale and his wife, delightful people.

One grand thing about DeMille is, if he likes you, you're practically set for life. On the set were Julia Faye; who's just signed another long-term contract; Maude Fealy, and her mother. DeMille worked with Maude back in Elitch Gardens in 1902. And in Denver, Maude worked with Doug Fairbanks, sr., also Ernest Truex and Lynne Overman.

Maude's mother was leading lady for Henry Irving, also Richard Mansfield. There was that fine Shakespearean star, Walter Hampden, brought 3,000 miles to do three days' work. But being in town, Warners grabbed him for "They Died With Their Boots On."

I arrived too late for Paulette Goddard's ducking. Elizabeth Risdon, looking young and cuddly in those 1841 costumes. And Bob Preston, licking his chops because he remains romantic and unmussed throughout the picture. The wind, rain, storm, sea, never touch him. And while Goddard is taking a beating from all hands, he stands by in safety and yells "How you doin,' Baby?" Baby and the others were doin' all right.

Only yip came from Lynne Overman, whose glued-on beard and mustache gets mighty itchy around 3 p. m. Says he, "Only the vision of that weekly check keeps me from tearing my face off."

Judy Reduces, Then Celebrates

Excitement in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer wardrobe department may be blamed on Judy Garland.

Reporting for her first fitting for her role of Betsy Booth in the new Hardy Family picture, the young star discovered she had lost 3 inches in measurements. All her wardrobe must be altered to fit her new sylph-like figure.

Incidentally, Judy was more than happy to see they were all summer clothes, for it is the first time she has had the right outfits in the right season.

A Quiet Fourth?

In spite of the local ban on fireworks, 68 persons required medical attention last Fourth of July as a result of fireworks accidents in the District. This year the Commissioners seem intent on a better showing, for they have discovered that caps for toy pistols are technically "explosives" and, therefore, subject to the ban. This will be a cruel blow to the Capital's youngest men and, if the truth be known, contribute little to a safe and sane Fourth. The majority of injuries are caused, of course, by salutes and night display pieces. Last year these were brought into the District and set off with bland disregard for the law. This will undoubtedly happen again today and tonight, for fireworks have been reported for sale in several adjoining communities. In the past the police have been lenient with most offenders—rightly so, in the opinion of many residents, who for most of their lives have considered racket-raising on the Fourth as a legitimate, almost a constitutional, right to be exercised at will so long as persons or property are not endangered. Nevertheless local ordinances—and similar ones in 13 States—have helped reduce the national casualty list, which last year included nearly 4,500 killed, blinded or maimed. So remember that tonight—if and when you light your perfectly legal sparklers!

Stalin Explains

In a talk to the Russian people over the radio Wednesday Josef Stalin found himself in the doubly unhappy position of one forced to explain a policy that has led to disaster and at the same time to admit the magnitude of that disaster. He did better in admitting the disaster. He did not try to conceal from his listeners the gravity of the danger confronting Russia. He confessed that the German army has made vast territorial gains at Russia's expense. And he did not hold out any immediate hope that the German juggernaut would be stopped in its tracks. "The Soviet people should understand," he said, "the full immensity of the danger" that confronts them.

When he got around to justifying the nonaggression pact with Germany, Stalin's explanations were not only unconvincing but also revealed the slippery character of his mind. Was it not an error on the part of the Soviet government to conclude such a pact, he asked? His answer was no. The breathing spell gave Russia 18 additional months to prepare for war. Besides, "not a single peace-loving state could decline a peace treaty with a neighboring state, even though the latter was headed by such fiends and cannibals as Hitler and Ribbentrop." But this, of course, is nonsense. It didn't give Russia time. It gave the Nazis the go signal, and provided them with the opportunity to smash their victims one by one till Hitler was strong enough to come to grips with Russia. Had Stalin not betrayed Poland, but had, instead, come to her assistance, Russia would not have had to face all alone the full impact of the Nazi war machine. It is doubtful whether even the most ignorant muzhik will be simple-minded enough to accept Stalin's suggestion that Russia had no choice but to accept the German offer of a nonaggression pact.

As the unquestioned dictator of Russia, as the author of the purges which decimated the Russian high command, as the crafty collaborator of the Nazi Fuehrer in the months after the outbreak of the war, Stalin's responsibility for the tragic plight of his country is tremendous. Still the war which Hitler is waging in the East is not against Stalin but against Russia. The defeat of Russia would make of that vast country still another satrapy of the Third Reich. That is, perhaps, why the shattering blows dealt by the Nazi Wehrmacht have not been followed, as some expected, by an internal upheaval in Russia. On the contrary, the evidence so far suggests that the morale both of the civilian population and of the Red army is good. And if it remains unbroken, Hitler may yet come in for some surprises. But, whatever happens, the one certainty is that Stalin's goose is cooked. In assuming complete authority, dictators also assume complete responsibility. And the greatest crime they can commit is failure. Mussolini failed, and has been reduced to the status of a Quisling. Stalin failed, but will not be permitted even that way out. If Russia is saved, it will be by the Russian people themselves.

Tax Timidity

The outstanding mark of the tax program contemplated by the Ways and Means Committee is its timidity. To be sure, the plan, which still has to get a finishing touch before it becomes a bill, is designed to yield about $3,500,000,000. That is, indeed, record-breaking, though even this sum is a very reasonable exaction in view of the stupendous spending program ahead. It is the distribution of the burden rather than the amount to be raised, however, that shows timidity, if not pusillanimity. What we need right now is a broad-based tax program which would bring in new taxpayers as well as new taxes—a tax system, in other words, which would provide more and still more new revenue, possibly for a good many years. This is just what the plan of the Ways and Means Committee does not provide. It would load additional taxes on a limited number of individuals and corporations already heavily taxed, instead of extending the new levies to larger groups by lowering income tax exemptions and providing what is most essential at a time when our defense requires first call upon our production, namely, general sales taxation.

No doubt the taxpayers in the middle and lower taxable income brackets can stand the proposed higher rates. At any rate, these are modest when compared with British rates. The current emergency, together with the fact that Government spending is boosting business profits, also justifies heavier impositions on corporations. But the lack of a broader base makes the plan unfair in its incidence. For instance, the family head with a net income of $2,500 or $3,000 who might cheerfully pay several times the amount of his present taxes to help finance defense naturally feels resentful when his taxes are multiplied several times while the family man earning $2,000 or less goes scot free. And buyers of corporate stocks whose willingness to take risks is based upon hopes of later windfalls are also discouraged by a tax program imposing drastic levies upon corporate profits without commensurate impositions upon other groups. Likewise the list of new excise taxes does not go far enough. The committee has again followed the line of least resistance—by stepping up rates on articles already taxed, or else imposing new levies on a limited list of luxuries and nonessentials. The excise list is not nearly long enough nor varied enough to bring about a substantial reduction in consumer buying, as is required by the urgency (in the interests of defense production) of reducing competitive civilian expenditures. Indeed, the list carefully leaves untaxed those articles of general necessity that we need to conserve for defense uses, and which we may have to ration in the absence of taxes.

In short, the tax program is par excellence a political measure designed to spare the many at the expense of the few. For it carefully avoids dipping directly into the purses of the wage earners and small salaried people who constitute the great majority of the American people, while it makes only a half-hearted, ineffectual effort to reach the same public indirectly by means of excise taxes. The Ways and Means project deserves a thorough rewriting.

More Marriages

There is no telling how long the present rush to get married will continue, but it has already assumed such proportions as seemingly to dispute actuarial claims of a stationary population before many years. The Census Bureau has just announced that last year about 1,500,000 couples were married. This is at the rate of 11.8 per 1,000 of population and approaches the all-time high of 12 set in 1920. Moreover, the marriage rate this year is reported to be even greater than in 1940. There are, of course, two obvious reasons for this development. One is the much publicized and perhaps overrated effort to escape the draft, the theory being that the acquisition of a dependent automatically brings at least deferment. Undoubtedly many have availed themselves of this dodge, and found their reasoning borne out by the decision of some of the draft boards. But a more substantial reason for the increased marriage rate is clearly the improved economic status of young Americans, many of whom felt impelled to live in "single blessedness" during the depression years.

Naturally marriage is no guarantee of a rising birth rate—but it is an encouraging sign. Following the 1920 marriage high, which came just after the demobilization of the Army, there was a birth high in 1921 of 2,600,000. In fact, as the Census Bureau points out, the high birth rate of the early 1920's accounts in large part for the recent increase in marriages, since many of those postwar babies are now coming of marriageable age. It is not necessarily fallacious, therefore, to assume that in the natural course of events, perhaps supported by further cataclysms of war and depression, there will be another boom in marriages in the early 1960's. If so, it will be proof indisputable that we do indeed live by cataclysms. So far, nobody over here has figured out a way to break down the 20-year marriage cycle into say 5- or 10-year cycles, or less. Mussolini and Hitler have applied showmanship to the problem but come out with singularly nonspectacular results. Material rewards such as they offer for large families would never suffice in America, nor will they suffice very long in Europe. For the simple truth is that you cannot purchase a rising birth rate by bounty.

Continental Policy

For obvious reasons the State Department welcomes Uruguay's proposal that any American nation engaging in a defensive war against a nonhemispheric power should be treated as a nonbelligerent by the other American republics. The proposal implies that subscribing countries would permit the use of harbors and base facilities by any American nation engaged in a defensive war with a European or Asiatic power. And it would therefore enable the United States, in a war with Germany or Japan, to use Latin-American naval and air bases. Such use would, of course, simplify defense of the Americas. Indeed, the prospect of having to fight in South American waters far from our own bases has long handicapped Navy and War Department defense plans.

However, the proposal has already met opposition. Argentina formally rejected it early in the week, and Chile is reported to be unenthusiastic. Both countries, it should be remembered, have large German or Italian populations, and have been slow to counteract Axis influence. Uruguay's proposal, therefore, puts to the test a fundamental premise of hemisphere solidarity, which is joint action by the American republics against any non-American aggressor. Without common acceptance of the premise, solidarity remains a myth. Acting Secretary Welles restated the policy of this country when he emphasized that the proposal would "light the way toward a constructive and practical cooperation among all of the American republics." And he rightly stressed the fact, by way of inviting reciprocity, that the United States has extended economic and financial aid to the other American republics and has made available to them the rights to naval and air bases gained from Britain and Denmark.

It may be that by throwing the full weight of our prestige behind Uruguay's proposal, other countries in Latin America will be induced to support the measure. But without united support the way is still open for military penetration by the totalitarian powers.

Getting Hango Back

It was inevitable that the Finns would set siege to Hango as soon as the Russians got locked in war with Nazi Germany. This is the port upon the demand for the lease of which the Finnish negotiations with Russia of two years ago broke down. Hango, in other words, brought on the war. As is being said now, so it was said then that Hango is "a pistol pointed at the heart of Finland," and no Finn could grant a lease on it to Moscow without fighting. But Stalin had set his heart on Hango, and finally secured it in the peace terms. The emphasis that Stalin attached to Hango showed the real reason he went to war with Finland. He wished to bottle up the Gulf of Finland. Already he had secured the Estonian port at the entrance, Baltiski. Opposite was Hango, about 60 miles across, and possession of both ports was essential to the project for making the gulf all-Russian. Only by making the gulf all-Russian could he feel that Leningrad at the head of the gulf was safe. Stalin's fear was that Germany, again mistress of the Baltic, might be tempted to take advantage of the opportunity of the war with Britain, and attack Russia. He was even said to fear that the war might grow into a British-German alliance, or the counterrevolution. Now Stalin has created, in Hitler's move against him, the thing he contemplated. And the country whose interests and whose territory were forgotten in the press of Stalinish fears is now determined to take the pistol out of Stalin's hand which was represented by the Soviet lease. The Russians cannot possibly hold out in an action which is so far removed from their frontier.

STERILE SHEAVES

("Death will stand grieving in that field of war . . ." Siegfried Sassoon in PRELUDE: THE TROOPS)

Death gathered grain upon an alien field,
As once another gleaned, whose name was Ruth;
But Death worked grudgingly, and tears congealed
Upon her sterile sheaves of wasted youth.

She straightened, stooped, and paused again to mourn—
Death, who could be so kind, whose touch could bring
Rest to the stalk the years had bent and torn
And peace from storm and cruel buffeting.

She could not bear to pluck unripened seed
From stems too immature; her heart was wrung
By this wild harvesting that would impede
All future growth by cutting grain too young.

Death stood upon the battlefield and wept,
Sick with bewilderment and grey with grief;
Downward and up, her weary fingers swept
The powder-blackened grain to fill her sheaf.

High Finance

News reports from Washington, June 2, credits Stacy May, chief of OPM's Bureau of Research and Statistics, as saying that the United States must spend $40,000,000,000 a year on arms production to insure the defeat of the Axis powers. This is a program for total destruction. Nevertheless, to date I have heard no university professor, economic specialist or tax expert attacking this program as being financially or economically impossible.

For several years Dr. Francis E. Townsend has been advocating that America invest approximately $6,000,000,000 annually, in a scientific pay-as-you-go constructive program of voluntary retirement pensions to all citizens 60 years old and over, so that every American may enjoy happiness, security and national prosperity; to create a Christian example of economic progress, peace and abundance that all mankind would eventually accept. However, Dr. Townsend was promptly branded a dangerous "crackpot" by our wiseacres. They attacked his plan as being fantastically unsound and impossible; that it would bring about complete economic collapse and national bankruptcy.

If the war has done nothing else, it has completely vindicated Dr. Townsend and his humanitarian plan and definitely repudiated his biased critics.

IRVING C. PIERCE.
Minneapolis, Minn., June 27.

Control Of The Seas

For many years the control of the sea has been a joint Anglo-American concern, because the security of England is also dependent upon it. Since the last war the United States and England have shared the control. This arrangement has one serious flaw: A threat to the sea power of one nation is a threat to the security of both countries.

At the present moment the sea power of England is gravely threatened, and with it our own safety. For our own sakes, not for England's, we must take steps to make certain that the control of the sea does not pass from our own and friendly hands to those of aggressor nations of ideologies totally alien to our own.

B. W. FRAZIER.
Garrison, N. Y., June 30.

American Lives

Responsibility for the safety of men in the service of the United States Navy rests with the Navy Department. Men whose lives we cannot spare through carelessness or neglect should not be sent to their deaths in obsolete submarines or onto foreign sea-going ships into the war zones where U-boats are known to be lurking in search of such ships to sink. The Navy Department and the office of the Secretary of the Navy should not make the gross mistake again of sending its marines and Red Cross nurses by sea. They should be sent, if at all by air—in an air transport clipper ship, in the same manner as the British flying boats. "Keep Our Boys Flying—Not Dying on the Seas" must be America's slogan today. A little more intelligent thought and wiser judgment on the part of those responsible for American lives would be appreciated.

FREDERIC G. FROST.
Washington, July 2.

Suggestion

This defense emergency is going to cost the American people in blood and tears and sacrifice. Higher taxes will increase food prices, rents, and costs of clothing, all essential to human subsistence. The Government is employing additional man power daily to meet this emergency. Would it not be good business to offer part-time work to the physically capable retired former Government employes? They must eat, live in homes, and wear clothes at whatever price they must pay. This proposition merits serious consideration and discussion by the publice.

RETIRED P. O. CLERK.
Washington, June 21.

America's Big Chance

After so many mocking occasions of "too late with too little," comes now a last opportunity to make this a reasonably short war instead of an appallingly long war. And are we equal to the occasion? Have we the decidedness of character to make this golden opportunity into a real thing? Or is Hitler to outguess us again in his guess that we won't take any big steps while he takes the tremendously big step of knocking Russia out once and for all, so as to give full and undivided attention to Britain—and to us?

Without doubt there are still many lightingly real lovers of freedom—many real Americans—in America. There are multitudes who realize that speed is of the essence of victory, and who say, with Admiral Farragut, "Damn the torpedoes, go ahead!"

By raising their voices to the pitch called for today, such real Americans can completely drown out the Nazi-Fascist-Pacifist loudspeakers, and as well the "see no peril, hear no peril, speak no peril" isolationists who imagine they see, hear and speak for this whole land of the free and home of the brave.

Yes, we can arrive at once at the very height of action if we make our desire known. And we shall certainly make our desire known, once our eyes meet those of this world monster. Look, America, at your deadly peril and your opportunity for salvation and believe your God-given eyes!

BOLLING SOMERVILLE.
Norwood, Va., June 25.

It looks to me as though America is going to lose her one big chance now to act against Hitler by going to war while Hitler will be occupied for the next six weeks against Russia.

I have seen warfare in that territory with the Polish army in 1919-1921—just 20 years ago—and even if the Russians put up a good fight they cannot hold up against the mechanized and motorized forces of the Germans.

For us to sit by and lend help that we can't even get to the Russians is to defeat ourselves and our chances. The thing for us to do is to strike Germany where we can, and that is by declaring war, which would be a terrible blow to the German morale. Anything else at this time means that America will be endangered forever.

I cannot understand why the President does not act before it is too late. To expect other people to fight our battles is morally wrong and terribly dangerous, to say the least.

I feel that this is America's last chance. PETER MARKAM.
New York City, June 26.

Pope's Address

Expectations seem not to have been realized with respect to political implications in Pope Pius' broadcast to the world. But it should be remembered that very definite committal in such matters is not the policy of the Vatican. And from the standpoint of modern democracy, and particularly American democracy, a basic principle of which is complete separation of church and state, it should be recognized as entirely proper that deliverances of ecclesiastics, as such, should deal with religious and not political considerations. It is unfortunate, from that standpoint, that pronouncements by the head of an ecclesiastical institution should be anticipated widely as of great importance politically. This is suggestive that there is a pronounced assumption that the institution does not confine itself to the religious sphere but can, when it desires, exert considerable political influence. JOHN D. BRADLEY.
Takoma Park, Md., June 26.

"The Intoxicated New Dealers"

Charles Baudelaire said one should always be drunk. And according to Baudelaire, be drunk on what you please. Wine, poetry or virtue. No matter. But be drunk.

Our New Dealers have become drunk on virtue. And it does not agree with them. It was out of redundance of virtue that the New Deal gave us our "social gains" and the result is that the entire Nation has a splitting headache from the virtuously intoxicated New Dealers.

It may seem a trifle incongruous to rational people, but it is nevertheless true that in its superabundant plenitude of exuberant virtue, the New Dealers have statutory laws of their own clever devising that have outlawed from this great liberty loving country the "Spirit of '76."

Imagine, for instance, a patriot aflame with patriotic fervor desiring only the right to die in defense of his country. In 1776 he could have done that. Not today. Left wing liberalism would not permit it. That is except in a decorous sort of way. To the enthusiastic patriot the Red labor leader would say, coldly, "Where is your union card?" The very life of the Nation might very easily depend on the output of airplanes. Does that deter the aristocratic left wing, liberal, enthroned god of labor? Not a whit! He is a patriot, of course. He demonstrated that in the recent California strike. The one that Attorney General Jackson referred to as "insurrection-ary."

To the intoxicated New Dealers the right to paralyze airplane plants, aluminum plants, magnesium plants etc., etc. is a "social gain." Unless coal operators meet the demands of John L. Lewis by July 7, he will stop coal production in the Southern States. That, of course, will have a paralyzing effect on all industry. If we wish the privilege of defending ourselves against totalitarianism, we must meet Mr. Lewis' terms. He is the dictator. He has a rope around our national necks. The New Dealers fastened the rope for him. They still call it a "social gain."

They say, furthermore, that the foreign menace would not justify us in giving up this "social gain." If we crawl on our bellies to the enthroned god of labor, bare our backs and let him wield the lash—well that reminds us that in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," Gibbon relates that Heliogalabus regaled himself with the sight of criminals being torn to pieces. American labor leaders, in their excess of patriotism prefer to see their country torn to pieces rather than give up "social gains."

There was a man in this country who once said there is no right to strike against public safety, any time, any place. In the present crisis, a coal strike is a strike against the public safety. Maybe the New Dealers have been drunk long enough. W. W. PHILLIPS.
Nashville, Tenn., June 28.

The Post Impressionist

On This Day

John Adams, second President of the United States, exclaimed on July 4, 1826, with his last breath, "Thomas Jefferson still survives!" He was mistaken. Jefferson had died exactly one hour before. And if it were not enough that two Presidents passed away on that most auspicious of anniversaries, James Monroe, fifth President, died on the Fourth of July, five years later. As an additional coincidence, the July 4th that marked the deaths of Jefferson and Adams denoted 50 years of independence for the United States.

In 1826 patriotic Americans determined to celebrate this half-century of freedom with more joy and fanfare than had been manifested in former years. Washington citizens invited Jefferson to unite in the festivities, not only as a former President of the Union, but as a signer of the great document. His letter of declination was the last he was ever to write. The failing, feeble handwriting showed the Death Angel to be not far away.

On June 26, on being placed upon the bed on which he died a week later, he said, "I do not wish to die but I do not fear to die." He handed to Mrs. Randolph, his daughter, a small Morocco case, gave directions about his coffin and interment and requested to be buried at Monticello, without display or ceremony. He died at 10 minutes before 1 o'clock, July 4, 1826, aged 83, within the same hour on which, 50 years earlier, the Declaration of Independence had been promulgated. Opened, the Morocco box contained "elegant and affecting strains of poetry on the virtues of Mrs. Randolph." Mr. Jefferson wrote his own epitaph and, either by design or forgetfulness, in enumerating his life incidents, failed to put down that he had been a President of the United States.

The passing of John Adams occured at his home in Quincy, Mass. He also had been invited to enter into the spirit and program of that mighty fiftieth anniversary. But 90 long and busy years had taken their toll and he was nearing the end of the great adventure. His fellow townsmen insisted, however, that he at least propose a suitable toast for the auspicious occasion and he offered two significant, potential words: "Independence Forever!" Those were times of flowery and grandiloquent speech and Mr. Adams was requested to amplify the toast. He answered, "Not another word!"

On July 4, of 1826, every village, every town and every city was not only joyously celebrating but persistently coupling the names of the two signers of the Declaration of Independence who had become Presidents: Jefferson and Adams. At Quincy, the gentleman who proposed Mr. Adams' toast later wrote: "As I pronounced the words, 'Independence Forever,' a mighty shout went up; a shout that might have been caught by the former President"—but the very air that carried those rousing cries of approbation from the multitude bore aloft the soul of John Adams.

As the news of the deaths of the two former Presidents on Independence Day slowly penetrated to the outposts, a haze of emotion enveloped the people; orators voiced the astonishing coincidence, and many saw in it the purposeful hand of the Almighty.

The Rev. William Staughton, then chaplain of the Senate, delivered a sermon at the Capitol on July 16, in which he said:

"No ordinary circumstances have induced us to assemble here this morning. Twelve millions of our citizens have received or are receiving the intelligence that two of the greatest statesmen the world has ever known, both died on the same day, the day on which the trumpet of jubilee was sounded. This interesting fact will become incorporated in the history of the Union and excite the astonishment of future ages. It would seem by this unparalled Providence as if Jehovah was saying to the American Nation, as well as to the Hebrew nation, 'Ye shall hallow the fiftieth year.'

". . . Search the histories of the world and in vain will be your attempt to find so surprising a coincidence. Mr. Jefferson expressed his wish to live until the great fiftieth anniversary; his desire was granted. Mr. Adams, on hearing the voice of the cannon and being informed that it announced our jubilee, exclaimed, 'O, it is a great and glorious day!' and spake no more."

Former President James Monroe died at his Prince Street home, New York City, on July 4, 1831, five years to the day of the passing of Jefferson and Adams. One authority, alluding to the date of his demise, states: "His death added to the wonder; it was as though a power aloft had taken cognizance of this peculiar patriotism of these three mortal and immortal men and translated them on the same day of jubilee. In a more superstitious age the coincidence would have constituted a marvel."

Mr. Monroe was buried in City Marble Cemetery, New York City, in an unlettered vault erected for the family of his daughter, Mrs. S. L. Gouverneur. Twenty-seven years later the remains of the former Chief Executive were removed to his native State, Virginia, and interred in Hollywood Cemetery, at Richmond.

The Defense Mediation Board

THE DEFENSE MEDIATION BOARD is being criticized for forcing the closed shop on Bethlehem Steel's West Coast shipyards. The criticism seems to spring from a misunderstanding of the problem as it was viewed by the members of the board. This was simply whether Bethlehem should conform to an agreement already made voluntarily by every other West Coast shipyard.

LINDLEY

Review of the bare essential facts must begin with the Government's concern with getting speedier and uninterrupted ship production at reasonable prices. In February and March the West Coast shipyard owners were brought together with representatives of labor, the Navy Department, the Maritime Commission and the Office of Production Management. From these conferences came an agreement fixing wage rates, both regular and overtime, and prohibiting both strikes and lockouts for two years.

HAVING ATTENDED to their primary interests, production and costs, the Government agencies formally withdrew. The agreement was then supplemented in collective bargaining negotiations between shipyards and unions. One result of these negotiations, perhaps the most important, was the closed shop.

The final master agreement was subscribed to by 38 shipyards—all except Bethlehem—and 20 unions.

Bethlehem had refused to take part in either the original negotiations at which the so-called "zone standards" were fixed, or in the subsequent collective bargaining between employers and unions. It accepted the zone standards, but not the other provisions of the master agreement.

The Bethlehem yard was struck on May 10. On June 2 all unions except the machinists heeded a request to return to work.

ON JUNE 18 the Defense Mediation Board recommended that Bethlehem accept the provisions of the master agreement, including the closed shop. This was the unanimous decision of the panel of three which heard the case, and on which the employer representative was Gerard Swope, former chairman of the Board of General Electric.

Because the explosive issue of the closed shop was involved, the panel's verdict was submitted to the entire board for review. That had not been done previously in any case, and it is not likely to be done again unless another unprecedented question of high importance arises.

ON THE FULL board only one member dissented from the panel's unanimous recommendation. The closed shop was a product of collective bargaining on a regional basis. On the employer's side Bethlehem was left as a recalcitrant minority of one. If the master agreement had provided for any other type of union protection—the union shop, union maintenance, or anything else—the decision would have been the same. The question was whether a regional agreement of great public value was to be jeopardized by a single employer. The picture was confused in the public mind, perhaps, by the strike of the International Machinists in the San Francisco area. This was a strike against the wage rates set as part of the original zone standards and menaced the whole framework of the stabilization agreement quite as much as Bethlehem's individualism. Perhaps more. That Communist influence was discernible in this strike has been admitted by national labor leaders of excellent repute.

Experienced labor leaders assert that among all the cases so far brought before the Defense Mediation Board, they have detected a Communist influence in not more than eight or nine—including two or three where its presence was dubious.

THE BOARD so far has had 46 cases referred to it. In 43, involving 700,000 workers, settlements have been reached or workers have continued or resumed work pending the board's recommendations. One case was sent back to the Secretary of Labor. One is pending, and the other was the North American Aviation case, delivered to the Army.

Since the President's proclamation of unlimited emergency, the board has had less difficulty in getting workers to maintain or resume work pending settlements.

The latest reversal of the Communist line may simplify the board's task still more, although many in the Government, as elsewhere, hope that it will not protect union officials whose past records have identified them as subject to Communist influence.

Southeast Poland Population Blood Brothers of Ukrainians

The southeast part of dismembered Poland, where some of the heaviest fighting in the Russo-German war has been in progress, is described in a bulletin from the National Geographic Society as a western outpost of the Ukraine, more Russian than Polish in character.

"Three-fourths of the residents are Ruthenians, who are a Slavic people," says the bulletin. "They are blood brothers of the Ukrainians, and their language is a dialect of Russian. Their bright native costumes are made distinctive by rich cross-stitch embroidery.

"The region, almost as large as West Virginia, long has been known as Eastern Galicia. In the 1939 partition of Poland it went to Russia; Western Galicia went to Germany. The two parts are so dissimilar that when independent Poland was being formed after the war there was a question as to whether Eastern Galicia should be included. The Ruthenians wanted the right to decide their future for themselves. Bitter fighting developed before the area was turned over to Poland, with the provision that a plebiscite should be held in 1944 to determine the people's allegiance.

"Eastern Galicia forms a rough triangle on the north flank of the Carpathian Mountains. Rumania and the Carpatho-Ukraine portion of former Czecho-Slovakia are on the south, with the German-held section of Galicia on the west. The region merges into the Ukraine on the east and approaches the vast Pripet marshes on the north.

"The largest city in the area is Lwow, capital of ancient Galicia. Because of its university, libraries and museums it has been called the 'citadel of Polish culture and learning.' It also is a commercial center, from which nine railroads radiated in peacetime.

"Eastern Galicia's oil deposits, around Drohobycz and Boryslaw, once made Poland rank high in world petroleum production. In recent years, however, some experts have expressed the belief that the fields were wearing out. Production has been small compared with Russian and Rumanian output.

"As in the Ukraine, farming is the principal occupation of the peasants. All kinds of grain are raised on the fertile land in the Carpathian foothills and on the elevated, almost treeless plains. Flax is an important crop; barefooted women and girls, their heads covered with kerchiefs, share in the work of preparing the flax for the looms. The growing season is hot but short; the mountains block the Mediterranean winds and occasion long, cold winters."

Stone Takes Oath As Chief Justice In Mountain Cabin

Rocky Mountain Park, Colo., July 3 (AP).—Harlan F. Stone born on a New Hampshire farm and once center of Amherst's football team, was sworn into office as Chief Justice of the United States today in a weather-beaten log cabin high in the Rocky Mountains.

The oath was administered by Wayne Hackett, United States Commissioner for Rocky Mountain National Park.

Standing before a window looking down a mountain valley Stone repeated firmly after Hackett, first the oath of allegiance and then the judicial oath. The ceremony ended at 3:35 p. m.

Reaction To Radio

The old-time medicine man and street faker rarely had the nerve to tie up the flag and national anthem with the sale of blood tonics, eyewash, soup stain removers and so forth. But how the radio is doing that job!

You can't tune into a rendition of "The Star-Spangled Banner" these days without finding it followed up immediately with a noisy spiel in praise of somebody's elixir of life.

You hear the air waves bearing some stirring patriotic message and before you have time to dodge you are hit amid-ears by a somewhat hysterical talk on the importance of a hair oil, tooth paste, toilet soap, stogie or breakfast food.

The broadcast giving the dramatic details of a battle of world importance is suddenly broken by an oily appeal to buy whooziss's nature pellets. And, believe it or not, we were knocked flat the other day by a commentator who abruptly stopped describing a great battle so the results of the fifth at Suffolk Downs could be given! Awah-h-h-h!

The radio commentator used to be spared the indignity of transforming himself from a scholarly expert on world affairs into a barker for pills, ointments, liver pads and frankfurters, but nobody is greatly surprised today when Oliver P. Woofus, internationally famous war expert, veteran of three wars, and student of current events, throws his dignity and his reputation into the bilge and dons the purple whiskers of a fly-by-night medicine man.

It is a question which he cheapens the most—the war, the merchandise or himself.

But it certainly doesn't do any one of the three any good.

The audiences sit back and fume at such catch-penny devices, but presumably the sponsors think anything is perfect as long as it mentions the product as often as it mentions Minsk, Tobruk, civilization and democracy.

Perhaps the most sickening trend of the last few weeks is the head-over-heels rush to cash in on the defense program and American loyalty to the flag. Recently some scientists emphasized the importance of certain vitamins in building the strength of a nation's people in time of war, and it seems to this correspondent that every other radio message since has been a strident, "Do you want to do your duty by your country? Are you determined to be the type of American that can defend this nation against all dangers? Then go to your corner grocery now and ask for ——, etc., etc."

We will now close with a request for "America, I Love You." And if we follow it up with an attempt to sell you any flea-bite cures or snake oils we hope we choke!

CROWNING GLORY

No trick of magician we've seen can compare
With the wonders a woman can work with her hair.
The elegant damsel who dazzles the eye
In her evening coiffure swept up gorgeously high
Get scarcely a glance from the male over yonder
Next day when her hair is let straggle and wander.
A garland of ringlets, and presto! one thinks
That here is a giddy, impractical minx;
But the masculine trim of a business like bob
Turns her into the sort who could hold any job.
A face-framing cluster of flattering tresses
Brings out all the glamour the lady possesses.
A bun or a braid makes her look rather quaint,
Which maybe she is, and then maybe she ain't.

While a woman thus alters her looks with her hair-do
And tries every kind of both common and rare do,
To the end of his days, as he youthfully started,
A man wears his hair either straight back or parted.

Dr. F. E. Auhagen Slated to Open Defense Monday

Dr. Frederich Ernst Auhagen, on trial in the District Court on Nazi propaganda charges, is scheduled to open his defense Monday afternoon.

Assistant Attorney General George A. McNulty said yesterday that he believed only one more day would be needed to complete the Government's evidence that Dr. Auhagen failed to register with the State Department when he was acting for the German government and its officials.

McNulty offered witnesses yesterday to show a close connection between official German agencies and the American Fellowship Forum established by Dr. Auhagen.

Of Men, Nations, And Animals

Avondale, Chester County, Pa.

SOME time ago, installing in the cow stable a new gadget we have, an electric fly killer, an elderly gentleman here on the farm remarked, with aging acridness: "Worst thing about farming nowadays is the lack of exercises; don't even have a chance to swing a fly-swatter; guess we'll have to move to the city and take up golf."

For that plaint, there is some basis. When I was a boy here, the only source of power we had was, literally, muscles—human and horse. From one year's end to the other, everything that was lifted or carried or pushed or pulled, got the power for the operation from a muscle. Even the heavy neighborhood threshing-machine was at that time driven by a treadmill—two lumbering oxen, who patiently paced up an incline without ever rising higher, the energy from their plodding passing along a belt to the threshing machine.

SULLIVAN

TODAY there are on this 190-acre farm, some 13 instruments of mechanical power—we counted up after our elderly associate had repined over the passing of opportunity for exercise. Of the five gasoline engines, two are in the automobiles, one in the truck. A tiny engine is on the lawn-mower—while we still push the mower by hand, the power that whirls the cutter comes from gasoline. Our largest source of power is the tractor, designed primarily for plowing and harrowing, but adapted to all sorts of work once done by muscle—sawing wood, shelling corn, pulling up tree roots. Such is the adaptability of the tractor, and the ingenuity of the men on the farm, that the tractor could accomplish any feat from moving a barn to cracking a hickory-nut.

There are eight electric motors, the principal ones for the pumps at the house and barn, and for the refrigerator that cools the milk. In addition to the electric motors, there are half a score of gadgets directly attached to the current, such as the electric cook-stove. One of these is the fly-killer, a grid of fine wires which electrocute the fly that alights upon them.

SOME of our neighbors use electricity for the function of separating fields—they call it a fence, though I cannot quite think of it as that. In any event it is a substitute for a fence, and as such makes obsolete a heavy old-time toil—the digging of post-holes, the hewing down and sawing and splitting of trees, chestnut ones for rails because they split readily, oaks or locusts for posts because they last longer in the ground. It took all that to make a fence, which if it were a boundary-line between farms, or along the road, had to be, in the language of the ancient legal standard, "horse-high, bull-strong and pig-tight."

All that is being pushed into the past by the electric fence. It is just a single strand of light wire, strung about 2 feet above the ground, on slight stakes, some 20 or 30 feet apart. Its serviceableness does not depend at all upon strength. It does not have to resist animals, it merely intimidates them. It gets its virtue from a slight current of electricity, not so strong as to hurt seriously, but enough to sting sharply. A cow whose legs come in contact with it backs away, and does not approach again. So far as record shows, it has never occurred to any cow that she could readily leap over that wire without touching it, or by one brief burst of resolution push it down. Animals not made effete by long domestication, the fox, the coon, or the 'possum—their minds kept keen, their personalities trenchant, by constant struggle—would not need half an hour of mental exercises to learn how to circument that new device of man.

The other day, something occurred which I wish I had seen, for I should like to have observed, or at least surmised, what went on in the bovine intelligences that were parties to it.

IT HAPPENED that two neighboring farmers released their respective bulls into fields separated by an electric fence. As the two animals noticed each other at a distance two fields apart, each raised his head truculently, snorted, bellowed in challenge, and in a lumbering trot started for the animal he had chosen to regard as a rival, whose necessary fate must be extermination. The first to reach the electric fence felt the sting, and backed away. So did the second. Each concluded, apparently that the sting he had felt was some new and mysterious art of combat devised by his enemy. In the angry conviction of each that the other was using foul tactics, they rushed at each other again. The second encounter with the wire, I am told, was enough. Thereafter, neither animal would go near the wire. But neither would they abandon their enmity; on the contrary, it was increased by their sense of frustration. For a whole afternoon, each bull beat a path in his respective field, parallel to the wire. About 20 feet away from each other, for hour after hour, they rushed up and down the length of the fence, roaring and bellowing; both with deadly hate in their hearts, each willing to fight to the death the enemy that he knew, but each in mortal fear of the foe he did not understand. Absorbed in fear and hate, they trampled down the grass that would have nourished them; ignored the peace and plenty that was all about them.

I REGRET I did not witness it. I feel that observation of it, with some reflection, might yield deduction applicable to the nature of men and nations, and bearing upon the present state of the world.

The Gallup Poll

Institute Offers to Conduct Opinion Survey On War Questions Agreed to by Both Sides

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., July 3.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler's attack on questions used by the American Institute of Public Opinion to test war sentiment has focused attention anew on the subject of polls and the wordings of questions used in them.

Similar attacks on public opinion surveys made during an election campaign can, of course, be answered by the election results, which show how accurate a poll has been.

Surveys on general issues between elections cannot be put to the same test since there is no system of official referenda in this country. However, the Institute has proposed to Congress a new type of "advisory referendum" which can be conducted quickly and inexpensively on any issues in which the Nation is interested. As outlined in a statement June 20, the plan would call for a bipartisan committee selected by Congress to conduct local referenda in areas picked at random in each geographical section.

Three Factors Cited

Poll accuracy in respect to issues is dependent upon three factors—the wording of the question, the number of people polled, and the cross-section, or type of persons polled. Of these factors, the number of persons polled is the least important. As educators, agricultural experts, medical scientists, sociologists and other experts long ago found, reliable results can be achieved when relatively few people have been polled. The laws of probability make it possible to tell within a fraction of 1 per cent the error arising from the factor of size of sample.

Of far greater importance in the science of public opinion measurement are the cross-section and the wording of the question.

In all surveys dealing with public issues the Institute interviews a representative cross-section of the voting population. In this cross-section there must be the correct proportion of all groups in the population—of Democrats, Republicans and minor party members, young, middle-aged and old, city folk and farmers, persons from all important occupational groups and in all income levels.

The cross-section used by the Institute in analyzing sentiment toward war and aid to Britain is exactly comparable to the cross-section in the Institute's election survey last autumn, when the average error per State was only 2.5 per cent.

As for the wording of questions, a special technique has been built up in recent years to test ballot wordings for bias.

Questions Pre-Tested

In the case of the Institute, all questions are first pre-tested in the field in a series of interviews with persons selected at random. This testing, made before the survey itself is begun, quickly shows any flaws that may exist in the wording, or phrases and concepts that are not easily understood or are misunderstood by the average voter.

Next, the Institute utilizes a simple and effective device for measuring the effect of phrasing in the survey itself. When a wording is in doubt, it prepares two phrasings of a question, and prints them on different ballot forms—"A" and "B." The "A" form is put to half the voters in the cross-section and the "B" form to the other half—both halves containing exactly comparable types of voters.

The tabulation soon reevals the difference, if any, which is caused by the wording. If the difference is greater than the expected variation due to size of sample, then new and neutral phrasings must be found.

"Split" Ballot Device

This technique, known as the "split" ballot device, is a highly reliable method for detecting flaws in questions. From experience in testing scores of issues, the Institute has found, however, that when every precaution has first been taken to word the question as neutrally as possible, the variations in wording between the two ballot forms produce virtually no difference in the results.

No matter how carefully a survey is conducted, the results are always disappointing to one group or another, particularly when the public issue involved is highly controversial.

To Senator Wheeler and to others who have criticised the wording of Institute questions as "tricky," the Institute makes this offer.

It will poll the Nation on any question which meets with the approval of any one of the following groups:

1. Senator Wheeler, leading isolationist, and Senator Pepper, leading interventionist.
2. President Robert M. Hutchins, of Chicago University, an active isolationist, and President James B. Conant, of Harvard, a leading interventionist.
3. The America First Committee and the Fight for Freedom Committee.
4. A committee of Congressmen with both interventionist and isolationist viewpoints represented.

Of Aliens

THERE IS NOT the slightest doubt that the people of this country have the right to close the books, and for any length of time, against the naturalization of aliens. This is our country and we make the rules of eligibility, so if we decide not to take in any more outsiders as full members until further notice no apologies are due anyone.

The question is whether it would be wise to do this.

As one who thinks it would be wise I would point to the fact, well known to all our practical politicians, that for a long time many of our naturalized citizens have voted by blocs and have turned important elections by their solidarity under the leadership of political colonizers or padrones. No election should be decided by any group which is still conscious of segregation from the whole American community, but this does happen and doubtless will continue to happen as long as we confer citizenship on masses of people who simply aren't yet Americans.

HOWEVER, that is water over the dam now. It is impossible to revoke the naturalization of such voters except by a laborious process in each individual case where it can be shown that citizenship was obtained by fraud, and the number who could be so denaturalized would be negligible. But it is easily possible to act on this experience now and thus put an end to the abuse within measurable time.

Our immigrants since the first World War have not contributed much to the peace and progress of the United States, wherein they have differed from the hordes who came tumbling ashore from the boats in the old free and easy days. True, those immigrants colonized and voted in blocs and politicians filling slates were careful to salt them with names which would appeal to the foreign born. But they were, in the main, workers who elected to venture to the United States as a land of opportunity, whereas the newer immigration has largely consisted of people who sought only safety and regarded this country as a refuge and nothing else. There is quite a difference there.

THE NEWER immigration has included many presumptious ingrates with fixed ideas of government and economy which had made them unwelcome at home, who had no sooner set down their bags here than they began to lecture us on our faults and try to set things right, according to their notions. They didn't want to become Americans, but wanted to make Russians or Germans or, better say, Communists or Nazis of us. Some of them got into our Government in the guise of economic advisers and counselors on social reform, and in our cities and, worst of all, in some parts of New York an old-style American is practically an alien in his own home town.

There comes a time when the native American reminds himself that the alien and the naturalized but only slightly Americanized citizen are not, after all, the only persons for whom the United States exists. He is suddenly aware that for years he has been hearing about the rights and troubles of the foreign born and is moved to assert that he who was born here is entitled to a little consideration, too, and not as a concession but as his right.

It offends the native American to be told, in effect, that the native population cannot produce men capable of performing important tasks, involving a call on patriotism, as well as individuals who came from the other side. He doesn't believe that this is actually so and suspects that such appointments are made with intent to appeal to blocs of alien-minded naturalized voters and to stimulate the growth of socialism, whether Muscovite or Nazi, in his native land.

THE NATIVE Americans are divided on a thousand issues and never vote as a bloc, but if they could be consulted it would be found that they want no advice from any foreigner, naturalized or not, on the conduct of their country, and deeply resent political appeals to foreign groups voting their prejudices or instructions, which determine the outcome of American elections. The American has heard Americanism derided as something smug and contemptible, and ideas imported from the hell of Europe extolled as noble and progressive, although disaster struck wherever they were tried in the Old World. He gets not merely weary but pretty damned sore about that, too.

Once an alien is fully naturalized, he is a citizen equal in rights to the native American and may be a little superior in privileges, although he has only a smattering of the language and no affection for the Republic.

The Constitution says the President must be a native American, but with that single discrimination the newest naturalized Muscovite or Bundist is as good an American, under the law, as the native who has tried always to be a good citizen and never wavered in his Americanism.

Uruguay's Plan

By Barnet Nover

A Test Of Hemisphere Solidarity

ON THE TWENTY-FIRST of June, the Republic of Uruguay submitted a proposal to the other American republics which, if generally adopted, would have a great practical and psychological importance at the present time. The proposal is that no American country be considered a "belligerent" if at war with a non-American power.

NOVER

Specifically, this would mean that in the event of war between the United States and the Axis, this country would be able to use freely the harbors, air bases and naval bases of the other American republics instead of being subjected, as a belligerent, to the rules and regulations laid down in the neutrality laws of those nations.

WHEN THE UNITED STATES declared war on Germany in 1917, its example was followed by Cuba, Panama, Brazil, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Haiti and Honduras. Several other Latin-American nations broke off diplomatic relations with the Central Powers and let it go at that. Still others adopted a policy of strict neutrality. Uruguay, while refraining from actively joining in the war (she was in no position to do so anyway), placed her facilities at the disposal of the Allies and the United States. Her present proposal, therefore, is entirely in line with the policy she pursued during 1917-1918.

In taking this stand Uruguay deserves a great deal of credit. Americans regard Moscow as extremely remote from the United States. The shortest distance between Moscow and New York is 4,983 miles, which happens to be several hundred miles less than the shortest distance between New York and Montevideo. Uruguay is a small nation, the smallest in South America, with a population of little more than 2,000,000. She has no navy, an insignificant army and an exposed coastline. Yet her government and people have made no bones of their sympathies for Great Britain and the United States and their detestation of the Axis.

WE HAVE HEARD a great deal during recent years of hemisphere solidarity. The inter-American conferences held at Montevideo, Buenos Aires, Lima, Panama, Havana, have helped to breathe life into that concept. But whether hemisphere solidarity could really stand the stresses and strains of a real crisis such as that which would arise from a Hitler victory is by no means certain. There is certainly a possibility that the isolation of the New World which would follow from the triumph of the Axis would immediately set in motion powerful centrifugal forces capable of wrecking the unifying efforts of the last decade. It is, in this connection, a disturbing fact that every time the winds of chance have blown in Hitler's favor, after the fall of Yugoslavia and Greece, for instance, or after the British debacle in Crete, the disposition to cooperate against the Axis has noticeably declined in certain Latin-American quarters. Nazi agents have played up these victories for all they were worth and they have been given invaluable assistance by such defeatists as Charles A. Lindbergh, whose pronouncements on the war have been spread broadcast all over Latin America.

UNWILLINGNESS on the part of some Latin-American governments to offend the possible winner has undoubtedly been a deterrent to the moves made by the United States in the direction of implementing in concrete form the general commitments of solidarity agreed on at the various inter-American conferences. Another obstacle has been the seeming indifference of some of the other republics to the developments taking place overseas.

At the Havana conference of last July, for instance, it took all of Secretary Hull's persuasive powers to bring home to some of his Latin-American colleagues the scope and immediacy of the threat to American security involved in Hitler's bid for world domination. And while the Havana Conference ended in a resounding success for inter-American solidarity, it is disturbing to note that a goodly number of the nations represented at that conference have even at this late date failed to ratify the Act of Havana.

COMING AT THIS time, therefore, the Uruguay proposal has a very considerable importance. Its reception should help separate the sheep from the goats, reveal those nations that are prepared to cooperate with us and with each other in the greatest crisis the Americas have ever faced and those that want to remain on the sidelines.

The importance of the proposal is reflected in the vigor of the note sent by Acting Secretary Welles to Montevideo warmly approving the initiative taken by the Uruguayan government. "A black night of fear and destruction and organized murder has engulfed almost all of Europe and a great part of the world," says Mr. Welles. "No country, anywhere, today, is secure from this unmasked lust for power and loot which has no limit but domination of the entire world."

It is encouraging to note that the response to the Uruguayan proposal has thus far been, on the whole, very favorable. The only voice raised in opposition to it has been that of Argentina which, in a 1,000-word note to its neighbor, declined to become a party to "automatic" commitments based on a hypothetical situation, namely, a war between an American and a non-American nation. Unfortunately, with American ships being sunk in the South Atlantic, with German forces smashing at Russia, with Britain still very much in peril, the hypothetical situation which Argentina complains about is not so very hypothetical after all.

Plan For Tire Price Ceiling Dropped As Unnecessary

Apparently reassured after conferences with tire manufacturers and distributors, Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday announced that he had temporarily abandoned plans for setting price ceilings on tires and tubes because "there was little prospect that the prices . . . would get out of hand."

On June 26 Henderson declared that he was about to freeze at present levels wholesale and retail prices of new tires and tubes, as well as newly retreaded tires.

Yesterday, however, he said that, due to competitive reasons, prices have recently been at low levels, and that "except for minor increases occasioned by higher material costs, there was every likelihood that these levels would continue."

Primary reason for continued price stability in the industry, it was believed, is the fact that several mass distributors have already announced prices, to be maintained throughout the summer, in their national catalogues. Thus price increases by other distributors would result in loss of business to those concerns which have established the lower prices.

Price ceilings were first thought necessary when the OPM announced a cut of about 20 per cent in the amount of crude rubber available to processors. Despite the cut, however, Henderson yesterday reported that industry representatives believed prices would not get out of hand, and pointed to contemplated reductions in auto manufacture which would be a further limiting factor on rubber demands.

Stassen, Moses Back Waterway

Republican Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota and Democratic Gov. John Moses of North Dakota concurred yesterday in President Roosevelt's contention that a St. Lawrence seaway and power development was vital to defense and the economic welfare of the Nation.

They advocated the program unqualifiedly before the House Rivers and Harbors Committee considering legislation to authorize it.

A GRAND and glorious day comes around once more. It is the Fourth . . . and no other date in our History so represents freedom and all that freedom means to us. On this, the one-hundred-and-sixty-fifth celebration of our Nation's birthday, we make a solemn declaration to make secure and protect that gloriously won liberty.

Chevy Chase Club Names Three New Chairmen in Defense Plan

By Lucia Giddens

On the eve of the patriotic holiday, leaders in the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday took stock of its new defense program which already has drawn scores of volunteers into a variety of practical tasks.

Three new chairmen have been appointed for activites under the plan. Mrs. J. Alan Machis will head the recreation and entertainment group, which will contribute to community programs, possibly for defense workers and service men, as need arises.

Mrs. James V. Bennett has been named chairman of the committee to arrange training for members who wish to learn new skills, such as typing, or to brush up on former skills.

Mrs. Edward Helmuth, in charge of volunteer county workers from the club, will act as liaison officer between the organization and the Volunteer Council of Montgomery County. For example, more than a dozen club members who signed up for motor corps work may be called on to transport children to and from clinics in the county, in service for the council.

Mrs. Edgar Fowler, second vice president and chairman of the defense committee, yesterday reported on how the plans are being worked out "on a practical basis."

At a called meeting of the club recently, when it was decided to carry on the defense program during the summer, members present filled out a questionnaire, indicating what they already were prepared to do and in what fields they wished more training.

Many Volunteer For Red Cross Work

The largest percentage volunteered for Red Cross work in sewing, knitting, first aid, surgical dressings, ambulance corps, home nursing or dietetics.

Largest demand for training was in typing, first aid, dietetics and nutrition and public speaking.

On the basis of these answers, club leaders went ahead with a start on the program, although a postcard quiz to the total membership of approximately 800 was sent out only this week.

"There has been no evangelizing, to try to sweep members into the program. It has been arranged to satisfy the eagerness of members who wanted to find something definite to do," Mrs. Fowler said.

"Our program will be closely integrated with community plans," she added.

"British women disciplined themselves long before war actually came. If our country does not enter the war, I think it is valuable for our club program to be pursued now, anyway, because members will have learned better teamwork within the club, and will have made contributions to community life," she said.

Has Performed Previous Services

Before she became defense chairman for the club, Mrs. Fowler already had found outlets for service of her own. She has assisted in operating the garment-cutter for the county Red Cross, once a week, and she helped to organize the office operations of the Bundles for Britain headquarters in Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Henry DeC. Adams, president of the club, called the meeting which set the summer program in motion.

Mrs. Joseph G. Maguire, chairman of the Red Cross unit of the Woman's Club, has organized a program to continue this summer without let-up. The knitting and sewing groups, under the leadership of Mrs. Edwin Hahn and Mrs. Alton P. Tisdel, meet every Tuesday morning from 9:30 to noon, at the clubhouse. The surgical dressings group, headed by Mrs. John Beveridge, jr., is at work on Wednesday mornings between 10 a. m. and noon.

A new group in first aid was to be formed this week, with Mrs. Arthur B. Hayes, jr., as chairman.

Another club activity, headed by Mrs. Chesly Manly, is the collection of magazines at the clubhouse for distribution to service men.

Her tulle veil, accented with sprays of tulle and orange blossoms, fell from a bonnet-effect headdress and she carrid a bouquet of white roses, gladioli and gypsophelia. An exquisite old-gold bracelet belonging to her mother completed the bride's costume.

Miss Anna E. Ball, of Purcellville, another sister, was maid of honor. Her frock, of cornflower blue marquisette and lace, was made similar to Mrs. Adams' and she carried a similar bouquet. # First Aids for the Summer Traveler

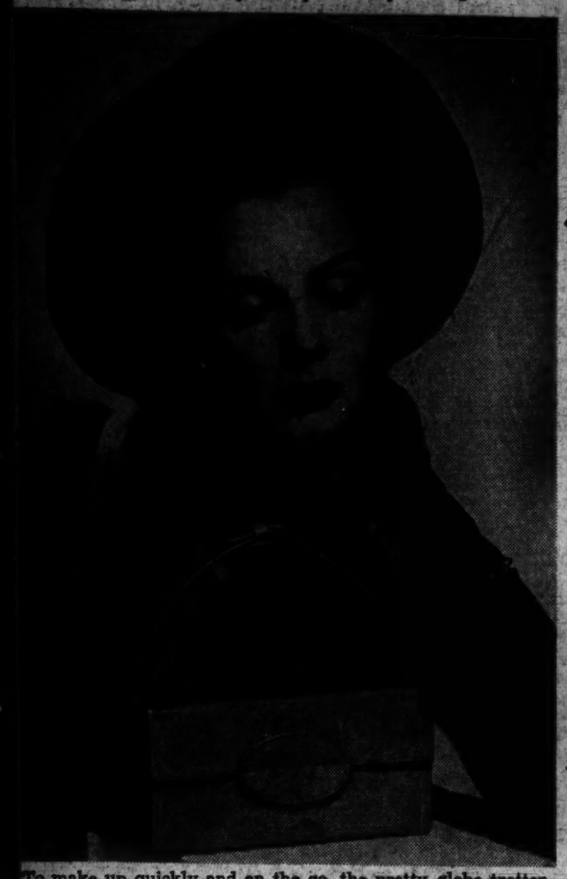
Whether you're off for a brief weekend or a two-month tour, you want to be a good traveler. That means looking fresh, rested and well-groomed for adventures along the way as well as the arrival. To achieve this, you'll need all the necessary first aids to beauty. But these should not weigh down your overnight case. Strange climates may do all sorts of damage to your skin, so you should take along a preparation specially designed to hide, not cure, temporary blemishes. Also, you'll need eye creams and packs to relieve the strain on tired eyes. If the train or automobile trip is long, tuck a dry shampoo into your bag

Two indispensable aids for the woman traveler are cleansing pads (left) and the leak-proof, evaporation-proof atomizer (above). The pads are sealed in aluminum foil and are saturated with cleansing cream. The crystal atomizer comes in a smart zippered, leather case. Designed for travel, the atomizer is small enough to tuck into your pocketbook or make-up kit



To make up quickly and on the go, the pretty globe trotter above chooses this well-equipped beauty kit. Little more than purse size, the "Convoy Bag" comes in different colors and leathers to match your pet train or plane costume. Inside are day and night creams, make-up, nail enamel and an empty compartment for personal gadgets

Supremely Happy in 14 Years' Marriage, Couple Nevertheless Dread Day When They Must, So They Think, Tell Their Children of Early Transgression

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Fifteen years ago, I was "keeping company" with my husband. He was attending college and because we were so young, our parents forbade us to marry. They tried to separate us. Now that we are older, we appreciate their viewpoint; but at that time, we were so much in love we couldn't listen to reason. Unfortunately, we surrendered to our feelings, and were forced to marry immediately. Our daughter was born seven months later.

In the years since then, we have been supremely happy, even though we have been through much trouble together. Today, we have three fine children,—a girl and two boys;—and it is about them that I am confused. We have never told the children the date of our marriage. We joke about it when they ask (which is seldom),—much as we joke when they ask us how old we are. They have every confidence in us,—as we have never lied to them or deceived them in any way,—and we must keep that confidence, at any cost.

We are always outspoken when any questions arise concerning the facts of life. Although we suffered much because of our mistake, we have long since "made good" with our respective families, who love us and are proud of us. And now that our children are reaching an age when they understand life, I want to know what to say to them when they ask how long we were married. Since we are moving soon to a town where we are not known, shall we add a year when we have our next anniversary? Is there any way we can explain our mistake, without sacrificing our children's love for, and faith in, us? I enjoy your daily answers to others and feel sure you can help us.

B. M. H.

Temper the Wind To Shorn Lamb

DEAR B. M. H.: It seems to me you have been conjuring trouble in supposing you have a terrific hurdle to take, in letting the children know when you were married. Obviously, your raw sensitivity concerning the circumstances of the marriage is making most of the difficulty—and if you have an idea that "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth" of the matter must some day be crammed down the children's throats, then you are entertaining a mistaken idea.

Since your first child arrived seven months after the wedding, and since it is not uncommon for Providence to bless the most correctly contrived unions with "seven months' babies,"—the date of your marriage and the date of your first baby's birth might have been (and, indeed, should have been) casually remarked in the children's hearing long ago, so that their curiosity would never have been provoked and tauntened by a sensed "conspiracy of silence" on the subject.

It is unfortunate that your emotional attitude toward that item of ancient history has been so strained and abashed as to set up a questioning reaction in your children's minds. But now that it has, the situation should be put right, once and for all, by giving the children as much of the truth as is good for them to know, the next time the question arises; and by absorbing the question, and your answer, into a flow of seemingly offhand reminiscent comment that immediately carries the child's imagination away from the "touchy" subject.

To illustrate, let's assume you were married in April of 1927; and that your firstborn arrived the following November. All right. One of the children asks, "Mother, when were you and daddy married." And you reply, "In April of 1927. A long time ago, wasn't it? I was just 19, and daddy was 21 and a junior in college. He was studying to be an engineer— I guess Junior takes after his daddy, that way. Why didn't daddy go on and be an engineer? Well, when we decided to get married, daddy quit college and got this job,—and it takes lots of education to be an engineer: a good engineer. That's why we're saving money so you children can have a fine education,—so that you can be tops at whatever you decide to be. You want to be a dancer, Babs? You mean a ballet dancer? Oh, like Ginger Rogers? . . . " Etc., etc.

Suppose, then—although it is an extreme supposition—that one of the children, in digesting this information, reviews the family history to note that you have been married 14 years and Babs (the firstborn) is almost 14. Take it in your stride. Say, in effect, "Yes, Babs was born in record time. She was a seven months' baby. Born just seven months and 11 days after we were married. And she was the cutest baby you ever saw, with the sweetest disposition! Even if she did have three-months' colic, and daddy and I had to take turns walking the floor with her. I was reading a magazine article just the other day, about what causes three-months' colic in babies. Johnny didn't have it, and neither did Junior. Maybe it was because I knew better how to handle them. This article said—" Etc. etc.

Keep the conversational reins in your own hands, always, in such discussions. And don't ever demean or set a trap for yourself by indulging in whole-cloth falsehoods,—such as "adding a year when you have the next anniversary." Keep to the truth; but draw upon the truth, in this delicate matter, only to the extent that it serves the high purpose of giving reassurance and self esteem to your children. Be comfortable in the knowledge that you are pursuing the ethical, mentally healthy, socially sound course in sparing them non-essential, potentially painful details about their parents' past.

My advice to you is to rise, psychically, above fearsome memories of that morbidly exaggerated initial mistake—which your subsequent performance has long since cancelled out. If you will sponge the episode from mind, by realizing the spiritual absolution you have earned, you will thereby eradicate any possibility of an occasion arising which would seem to require a confessional statement of the kind you have nervously anticipated for years.

Stork Shower Easy to Give

MR. STORK'S right at this shower—as dainty as a baby's layette! But, like many clever parties, not expensive.

The star of your lacy-looking table is a plain tomato basket you nimbly turn into a "bassinet" for the gifts. At each place is a lacy little baby-carriage favor you easily make from a plain nut cup.

In making the "bassinet," cover the basket inside and out with paper towels, pasting them on neatly. For the hood, take a strip of towel and paste one end around the handle, the other to the end of the basket.

Now cover the hood with a piece of dotted net or cheese cloth. Edge with a double ruffle of the same goods and around the sides tie a deeper double ruffle. Simple if you cut your material twice as deep as you want it, double it over and, under the fold, place your ribbon like a drawstring. As a finishing touch, add large fluffy bows—fill basket with gifts! Complete the lacy effect by using lace-paper doilies.

How to Make Living Rooms More Livable

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

The mannered parlor looks pretty in the movies, but Americans still prefer a living room in the fullest sense of that term—a room to live in. Mrs. K. G., for instance, has been gradually accumulating fine forthright pieces of maple furniture for her living room—because it is friendly and comfortable for family living. Now she wants to do over the walls, buy a rug, make new curtains. She likes yellow, but doesn't know what to do about it—can we offer suggestions? She can't spend a mint of money.

What about pale gray walls and a gray textural rug, yellow organdy curtains, yellow-flowered chintz slip covers, amber glass accessories?

Mrs. R. W. is in the midst of doing her living room over into a place where the whole family can settle down for pleasant evenings. Her living room and dining room open together and she treats them as a unit. The curtains are cream ninon with gold cords looped across the top, and the rug in the living room is a Sarouk with deep red predominating, while the sofa is in a soft green, one easy chair is beige, another is in a figured tapestry with soft red predominating. She asks about wallpaper and whether to have Venetian blinds, and if so should she have a single blind for double windows? What color cords and tapes on them? Should blinds be wood or metal? Should she have draperies, and if so what kind? There is a double window and a separate single window and she feels the single would look overdraped with a full pair of draperies, yet doubts if she can buy a half pair. How should the French door leading onto the porch be treated?

Why not have the walls done in soft, light green, then have draperies in this same green in sateen over Venetian blinds painted green, with tapes and cords in the same color. Curtains, blinds and draperies do seem like a lot in smallish rooms—you could dispense with one layer! On the other hand, all three could be useful together and would not look overdressed if handled properly. Either metal or wood Venetian blinds are all right providing they are purchased from a reliable dealer who will stand behind them. Bi all means though, have the single window hung with a full pair of draperies—they will look all right and a half pair here probably wouldn't.

As to Holidays

Give me the good old routine day,
When my work is cut out in a definite way,
And I do not have time to meditate.
On whither and what: or to celebrate.
Another milestone of a world on the move.
That doesn't seem in the least to improve.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

Mrs. Abraham Lincoln DePeyster will entertain the members of the Ladies' Parachute Patrol this afternoon with an old-fashioned Fourth of July picnic at her estate, Bleakhouse Acres. Outdoor chamber music will be presented in a pavilion on the estate by an orchestra from New York. Mrs. George Washington Jefferson Smart will read an original patriotic poem. Mrs. Paul Revere Tutt will be in charge of a patriotic fashion show in which patriotic gadgets in diamonds, rubies and sapphires will be featured.

Count Pierre Potage, noted refugee and continental connoisseur of wine and feminine beauty, has obtained a position as secretary to Mrs. Clancy Percheron, wealthy widow of the glazed popcorn tycoon. Count Potage will accompany Mrs. Percheron to her Clamport estate to help her prepare for the Diving Debutantes Pageant she will stage for charity.

Social Dilemma

The recent marriage of Miss Valerie Chives, daughter of the socially prominent Mrs. Casimer Chives, to Lorillard Dingbat, jr., who has enlisted as a sailor in the United States Navy, has complicated social life among Truthtown's uppercrusters.

The young Mrs. Dingbat by virtue of her social position is invited to all the swanky parties. But this makes matters embarrassing for such socialites as Mrs. Martinet Rammtree, wife of Admiral Rammtree, and Mrs. Puffington Pigeon, wife of Capt. Pigeon, who normally do not recognize socially the wives of sailors.

Wednesday afternoon at the garden party given by Mrs. Mike McPace, both Mrs. Rammtree and Mrs. Pigeon, who had been asked to pour, departed in high dudgeon because Mrs. Dingbat was serving punch.

Genealogical Note

Mr. and Mrs. Edgerton Chenoweth Dizzard have announced the engagement of their daughter, Ophelia, to Mr. Gregory Gullet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sapworth Gullet.

Two noted families will be joined by the marriage. Among the bride's ancestors are Dan Dizzard, a noted early day pirate; Lord Guzzle, famous British inebriate who passed out at Runnymede; Lady Divan, one of the mistresses of Casanova, and De-Forest Piffle, famous collector of hairpins in the gay 90's.

The bridegroom is a descendant of Lord Mountebank who double-crossed Queen Elizabeth; of Col. Montmorency Skittlewaite, famous Revolutionary traitor, and of Carrington Topknot, who once made a wig for George Washington.

The War Victims

"Not French wine!"

"Yes, it's a little I had left over."

"How marvelous! You know, I haven't had a taste of decent wine for months."

"I know—and of course the champagne market's entirely depleted."

"That really is serious!"

"And you can scarcely get hold of any real Russian caviar any more."

"No, nor Russian sables. I'm simply going to have to make my old furs do another winter."

"Me, too. Another thing—French kid gloves are getting scarcer every day."

"I know. And Flemish lace!"

"Well of course the hardest thing of all is to do without those beautiful French fabrics."

"I know. You simply can't get hold of a decent fabric—that is, that drapes properly."

"Another thing, they say the supply of Turkish rugs is getting low."

"Well that's just what war does to everybody."

"Yes, still there's one consolation."

"What's that?"

"I heard the other day that Dizzarelli had enough real perfume on hand to supply her trade for two years."

"Well, that's something."

Slow and Safe' Is Best Motto For All Holiday Sun Tanners

By Ida Jean Kain

THE GOOD old Fourth of ly officially opens the suntan ason. But the ultra violet rays hich cause you to tan also give u a burn. They're tricky. You n't see them and you can't alays feel the effect until after u have been over-exposed.

If this is your first venture in e summer sun, don't try to ove that you can take it or t out to acquire a rich ahogany coating all in the same y. You would be wise to limit urself to one hour in the rly morning sun and to camp nder an umbrella for the rest of e day. Along about 4:30 o'clock the afternoon, you might get way with another short sesn.

areful of Tender Skin!

As a rule, the tender skin ould avoid direct sun between e hours of 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. uring these hours the sun is ore nearly perpendicular to the rth and the rays are the most tent.

Clouds and haze are not the otection you'd expect them to . To some extent, they lessen e ultra violet rays, but you n't gauge how much. It is bet- to play safe and stay in the ade.

A severe burn not only makes u acutely uncomfortable but it akes you peel so that you lose me of the tan you expected to ire. The insiduous thing out a burn, however, is that you don't realize you're getting it until you have got it.

Watch for the first sign of redness in your skin and run for the shade the instant your skin begins to glow or to feel warm to the touch. Another few minutes may give you a severe burn.

Overworks Other Organs

The danger from sunburn is its interference with the normal functioning of the skin. The skin is unable to throw off the body poisons and an additional burden is placed on the kidneys. Then if you ride home in an open car and let the cool breeze blow on you, you're liable to get chilled. This further taxes organs already overworking to cope with the burn.

If you do get sunburned, drink plenty of water and fruit juices. Don't gulp down quantities of ice water while you are warm. Have the water cool and sip it slowly to avoid indigestion.

You should be careful to protect your hair from the direct blaze of the sun. The beauty and health of your hair depend upon its cystine content and part of the cystine is destroyed by those same ultra violet rays which give your skin its sun-kissed look and help you to manufacture Vitamin D.

And, of course, your eyes should be shaded with a pair of good, dark glasses.

N.E.A. Would Purge Radicals

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 3.—A purging of the American teaching profession of educators found "inimical to the best interests of our country," was recommended by the National Education Association, major teachers' organization in the Nation with a membership of more than 200,000 men and women from grade school instructors to university presidents.

Voting to set up the framework of a national commission of 60 educators whose duties would include investigation of "alleged subversive teaching," delegates to the N. E. A.'s seventy-ninth convention further implemented their action by adopting a resolution opposing the appointment of any teacher "who advocates, or who is a member of any organization that advocates, changing the form of Government of the United States" by other than constitutional means.

In appropriating $20,000 to support the work of the commission in the "defense of democracy through education," the organization designated one-half of that sum for combating by radio, press and other means "various groups opposed to education" and called for the maintenance of public support of education, despite defense spending.

Sam H. Harris, Producer, Dies Of Pneumonia

By the Associated Press

New York, July 3.—Sam H. Harris, the little man who went from the Bowery to Broadway, where he became the Nation's leading producer, died today of pneumonia. He had been in ill health since undergoing an appendectomy last March.

SAM HARRIS

In his 69-year span, Harris did things "big"—three of his productions won Pulitzer prizes—but two incidents were etched vividly in his memory as milestones:

1. At 11 he got his first theatrical job, when he was hired to trail a matinee idol from saloon to saloon and see that said idol eventually reached the theater.

2. At 22, he tried the racing business. He bought six horses and entered four of them in a seven-horse race. The Harris horses finished fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh. The producer-to-be traded his stable for a bulldog.

To list all his productions would take columns; some were "As Thousands Cheer," "Face the Music," "Dinner at Eight," "Let 'Em Eat Cake, "June Moon,' "Rain" and "Of Mice and Men." The Pulitzer prize winners were "Icebound," "You Can't Take It With You" and "Of Thee I Sing."

His latest hit was "Lady in the Dark,' the popular Gertrude Lawrence vehicle.

Harris married twice. His first wife, Alice Nolen, died in 1909. Two years ago he married Kathleen Brent Watson, sister of George Brent, motion picture actor.

Harris measured his plays only with the financial yardstick.

"I try to put on only boxoffice attractions," he said. "I judge their success on a financial basis."

Scrupulously honest, his handshake or his "M. K." constituted a contract.

He wore quiet clothes on a Broadway where belted-back suits are as common as neon lights. His favorite expression, to which he stuck, was:

"You can play only one way—straight."

fourth Street Northeast, on a sand bar just south of the Benning Bridge at about 11:15 a. m. Apparently Robin waded out too far and stepped off the bar.

An unidentified white man was fatally injured when felled by a truck as he crossed the street during the rain at New York Avenue and Ninth Street Northwest. Police were attempting last night to learn his identity through a slip of paper found in a pocket.

He was the forty-first traffic victim of the year. Thirty-six persons had been killed on Washington streets at this point last year.

Listed as the driver by police was Lewis Anderson Davis, 20, colored, of 405 Fifty-third Street Northeast, who was ordered held for action of the coroner's jury.

In Arlington, Va., Mrs. Lucia Micheiz, 30, of Milwaukee, suffered a broken leg when her auto was in collision with one driven by Mrs. Elsie P. Nixon, of 2300 Military Road Northwest. The accident occurred on the Washington-Richmond Highway. Mrs. Micheiz was taken to Emergency Hospital.

A few seconds after two autos collided on Memorial Parkway near Key Bridge last night, two more autos crashed in an attempt to avoid striking the first pair.

After the car driven by R. J. Feeney, 20, 1330 Newton Street Northeast, skidded into one driven by Mrs. Russell L. Root, 2132 North Courthouse Street, Arlington, Va., the third and fourth cars approaching in opposite directions collided when they tried to skirt the accident. Driving these cars were W. D. Denit, 4216 Reno Road Northwest, and Clem Ellis, 1700 Good Hope Road.

At Emergency—Minette Wheeler, colored, 44, of 13 Seventeenth Street Southeast; Raymond Williams, 19, Alexandria, Va.; Robert Blackwell, colored, 35, 2144 Eighth Street Northwest. At Providence—Artie Williams, colored, 19, 1739 Ninth Street Northwest; Clayton Campbell, 2841 Elvins Road Southeast. At Georgetown—Martin Audle, 27, Burke, Va.

Auriol Lee, Noted Actress, Dies in Crash

Hutchinson, Kans., July 3—Auriol Lee, 62, internationally known stage director and actress, was killed yesterday when the automobile she was driving skidded and left a highway.

A companion, Frank M. Epperson, 27, was injured, but his condition was not believed to be serious.

Miss Lee, who acted in and directed many of Broadway's outstanding hits, was en route to New York from the ranch of John van Druten, the English playwright.

At one time a leading Shakespearean actress, Miss Lee turned to play directing in her native England in 1925 and scored notably there and in New York with productions written by Noel Coward and Van Druten.

Broadway plays most recently directed by her were "The Distaff Side" and "Old Acquaintance."

She was born in London in 1879; 20 years later was a leading woman at Drury Lane. In 1903 she came to New York and played the lead in Kipling's "The Light That Failed." Then she returned to London and starred in George Bernard Shaw's plays, "Arms and the Man," and "Man and Superman."

In 1925, Noel Coward was trying to finance his play "The Vortex." Michael Arlen, the author, lent him money and Miss Lee offered to play without salary. The play was an instant hit.

Miss Lee maintained residences in London, New York and California. When killed, she was en route to New York to attend the wedding of the daughter of Dwight Deere Wiman, producer, with whom Miss Lee had been associated recently.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

IT'S A GRAND OLD FLAF. While the Star Spangled Banner will be waving everywhere today, you'll find the midnight tribute to our flag in Glen Echo's Spanish Ballroom especially heartwarming . . . As the hour hand touches 12, Paul Kain's band strikes into "The Star Spangled Banner" and the 1,800 or so youngsters who've been whirling in dance time all stop at attention and join slim Adele Van in singing the national anthem. Over their heads the American Flag, lighted by a blaze of white light, waves gloriously in an elecrtic breeze . . . It's beautiful and unforgettable—the sea of young faces, the rising tide of majestic melody and the waving red-white-and-blue banner that evokes this devoted tribute . . . While the midnight flag ceremony at Glen Echo takes on added significance this evening, it climaxes every night in the Spanish Ballroom, was introduced several weeks ago by Manager Leonard Schloss as a contribution to aroused Americanism.

"IMPERSONATOR NIGHT" A SMASH HIT. Folks filled every table, crowded wistfully behind the ropes for the first of the Neptune Room's Tuesday "Impersonator Nights." Remarkable talent made the evening a huge success . . . Fifty V. M. I. boys imeprsonated Fred Waring's Glee Club . . . A young draftee, Robert William Willoughby, gave his idea of John Barrymore's "Hamlet" but didn't blow up on his lines a la the Great Profile . . . Dick Leslie evoked a storm of applause and cheers in imitations of a dozen radio and celluloid stars . . . Lovely Mary Dohl made a colorful Carmen Miranda . . . Ruth Wallace shone as a feminine Gene Krupa . . . Other smart young folks, too . . . The party made a grand homecoming for Owner Raymond Lurba, who arrived around midnight, fresh from a South American tour.

WASHINGTON POST SONG. We asked the Anchor Room's Matt Windsor to sing a Russian song the other afternoon. "I'll sing you a Russian song you never heard before," said Matt, and he launched into a string of imposing and enigmatic decasyllables in which the words "Washington Post" recurred majestically every minute or two. We don't know what Matt said about The Post, but it sounded like a Sunday Post ad.

NEWS SNACKS. O'Donnell's Farmhouse is the new name of O'Donnell's Farms. Sounds nice and homey . . . While Movie Star Robert Montgomery is said not to have shown up at his new Navy job, he assuredly showed up in the Mayflower Lounge, caused a lot of girlish palpitation . . . Owner Burt Lopatin of Burt's Trans-Lux was out "drilling" in the countryside when we stopped in to visit. But whether he was drilling an oil well or a regiment, we couldn't say . . . The hot weather is too utterly delightful, in the opinion of the management of the Starlight Roof, which is doing its biggest business ever, with tables almost on the eaves.

Next star party to watch for is the annual Rainbow Room anniversary shivaree, which falls due about the last of this month but always sounds like the Fourth of July.

THESE THINGS WE LCVE. The perfect insanity of Arlynne and Borden's dancing at the Casino Royal, especially when Arlynne gives her boy friend an airplane whirl . . . The sunny, little-girl smile of Singer June Sothern at the Madrillon . . . The smoothie atmosphere of the King Cole Room, with loads of young folks chattering in undertones while Vicente de la Garza sings in a soothing subtone . . . The cool lilt that Carmela Lazari of the Hi Hat gives to "These Things I Love" . . . The decorations in the Silver Fox. They look as though they'd strayed out of "Fantasia" . . . The fact that Don Taylor always sings "I'll See You Again" once an evening in Restaurant "823." It happens to be his favorite song, as it is ours.

PLYMOUTH PARADOX. Michel, the Plymouth violinist, is a very dark and romantic-looking individual. Carlson, the pianist, looks like a picture of the perfect pater familias. But Michel is married and has four children, while Carlson is a foot-loose bachelor whose entire family consists of one wire-haired terrier.

COOLEST LOOKING COSTUMES around are those worn by Lotus' Dancettes in their waltz picture. These concoctions of white organdy are touched up with pale green and yellow, topped by big, transparent green hats. The Dancettes look like lovely garden salads . . . Lotuseers will continue to "oh!" and "ah" over the way Cortez spins Dolores on his shoulders without touching her with his hands. It's centrifugal force, we're told . . . Luncheon dance music at the Lotus tomorrow will begin at 12:30 and the revue will not go on until 1.30. It's a Saturday innovation only.

THE PORTENTIOUS FUTURE. Leo of the Mayfair is cheering up people with his prognostications about world affairs. He says that President Roosevelt will succeed where Wilson failed, that Japan will sit tight and do nothing, that Mussolini is washed up as a world figure, that the war will be over by this time next year.

YOUTH IS CALLED. Rodd Raffell's band at the Nightingale has been hit harder by the draft than any other orchestra around town. The extreme youth of the unit is responsible. They're all under 24. But Rodd has filled the vacancies quickly and efficiently.

RECOMMENDED DOWNTOWN STOPS. Harrington Tavern. The mixer here is such an expert that we actually saw a young lady pin an orchid on him the other day . . . Olmstead's Grill. The food will make you happy, and you get free cigarettes when you pay the check.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

FBI Will Hire 2,263 New Employes

Congress has been exceedingly liberal with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It gave the FBI all the 1942 funds it requested. FBI in fact, now has enough to hire 2,263 new employes. All will be exempt from Civil Service. These should reduce to a minimum the enormous amount of overtime that the bureau's employes have been compelled to work. It's hard to believe, but FBI employes here put in more than a million hours of overtime during the 1941 fiscal year. The supervisory force has worked from four to six hours of overtime daily and clerical employes have put in an average of 1½ hours of extra work daily.

J. Edgar Hoover, the No. 1 G-Man, said it would require 185 special agents and 284 clerical employes in Washington to wipe out the overtime. Congress gave the FBI funds to hire 1,666 additional employes in Washington. These will be fingerprint classifiers, clerks, supervisory employes and special agents.

In the field, Hoover was given money to hire 320 more special agents and 267 clerks. That enormous number of new employes certainly should reduce the overtime. Hoover has told members of Congress that young men can qualify for special agents if they are law graduates, or expert accountants, "or college graduates having linguistic or investigative experience." He said it is his plan to hire 83 new clerical employes each Monday in Washington until his new quota of employes is on the pay roll. The big administrative problem facing the FBI is office space to place its 1,666 new employes.

There's much speculation at Navy over the future of William D. Bergman, administrative assistant to the Secretary and chief clerk. He is an old-line employe and is reputed to be an outstanding civilian expert on the Navy. Apparently much of his work has been taken over by Admiral Henry Williams and Ben Abbott, who is chief clerk of the supplies and accounts division.

New Mine Bureau Unit

Bureau of Mines is building up a new unit to inspect coal mines. More than 200 employes, chiefly mine inspectors, engineers and clerks, will be hired. The money for the new unit became available on July 1. Most of the employes will be in the field and they will be selected from Civil Service, if possible. . . . Defense Bonds Division, in the Washington Building, also is expanding its force. A large publicity section is being built up. . . . The Division of Foreign Funds Control also is adding new employes. The division is one of the most overworked in the Government. Cots were even installed in some of the offices in the Raleigh Hotel for employes to catch a few hours sleep in the early hours of the morning.

Retirements at Government Printing Office: Lawson Bunch, Frank Carter, James M. McCauley, Amasa S. Randall, Joseph Taylor, Charles Wililams and Eugene Woodford. . . . More than 380 guards will be hired at Federal Building here within the next few months. Old buildings are increasing the number of guards and a dozen new structures soon will be taken over by the Government. . . . Commodity Credit Corporation will more than double its force in the 1942 fiscal year. It has about 250 employes now and it plans to hire 265 additional.

Rural Electrification Administration is increasing its personnel by 60. This increase will bring REA close to 1,200 employes. . . . The D. C. Federation of the National Federation of Federal Employes will hold a moonlight cruise the night of July 17. Committee members are Reginald Gheen, Leo Williams, Gertrude Schnellhorn, R. A. Hoyt, Marion F. Ruck, Norman Eiseman, C. B. Gannon, E. M. Zandonini, Grace Rearden, Virginia Schaeffer, Florence King, Robert Cushman and Lee Shugar.

Effect Is the Same

Newton, Mass., July 3 (UP).—Charged with drunken driving, Harry M. Stoodley, of Arlington, told the court today that he was merely exhilarated because he had just proposed and had been accepted by his girl. Judge Mayberry dismissed the case with the remark that "Stoodley was apparently under the influence—but not of liquor."

Rent Was Paid

Portland, Oreg.—Patrolman T. C. Freiberg said the drunk he found sleeping against a parking meter was willing to go to jail but he refused the officer's haste.

"He said he'd dropped a nickel in the meter and still had 30 minutes parking time to go," Freiberg reported.

Thunderous Reception

Watergate Symphony Concert Canceled, But Rain-Soaked Music-Lovers Hear Rehearsal

Paradox ruled at the Potomac Watergate last evening, when some 150 persons who had hopefully and tardily assembled there in the steady rain for the second summer program of the National Symphony Orchestra listened to a concert which was not given. Officially, the concert was cancelled because of inclement weather, but the contractual obligation for a broadcast had to be fulfilled, and what the patient, loyal and bedraggled auditors heard was a rehearsal of the numbers to be sent out over the network and the broadcast itself.

When it became evident at 8 o'clock that the rain was not going to stop, Charles O'Connell, the guest conductor, stoically shrugged off his disappointment, and set about the business of preparing for the broadcast, which was scheduled to take place after the intermission in the original program. There was an hour in which to select compositions, time them to fit into the period of the broadcast, and run through them for the final polishing.

The rehearsal was both a gay and strenuous affair—strenuous as far as work was concerned, and gay in the spirit in which it was performed. O'Connell conducted as though his life depended upon the results of his direction, and the musicians responded with their best efforts. The atmosphere was sultry, and there was considerable mopping of brows in the pauses of the music. These signs of discomfort were invisible to the auditors under their umbrellas, because the protecting curtain had been lowered over the proscenium arch.

Behind the curtain the musicians enjoyed this unusual variation in their concert routine. Jests were exchanged, and there were no frowns from the tousled director at this breach of discipline. Sylvia Meyer was applauded by her colleagues for the vigor and vim with which she executed a harp cadenza, and O'Connell gave her a bow. Even when something went wrong, and it was necessary to go back to letter G in the score to set things right, there was merriment instead of muttering. Since the concert was postponed for a second time last night, no further postponement was possible.

Merle Thorpe Buys Hollin Hall And Part of Mason Estate

VIRGINIA SHOW PLACE AUCTIONED—Hollin Hall, one of the show places of Virginia, which was sold at public auction yesterday

Hollin Hall, one of Virginia's historic show places and once the estate of George Mason, author of the Virginia Bill of Rights, together with 60 acres of land, was sold yesterday to Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business.

Thorpe recently sold his Maryland estate for a reputed $252,000 to the Norwegian government. It is now thetemporary home of Norwegian Crown Princess Martha.

The estate of Hollin Hall covers 600-acres 3 miles below Alexandria, on the Potomac, and 240 more acres are to be sold, the others retained. Neighbor to Mount Vernon, the estate is rich in historical lore.

George Mason deeded the estate to his son, Thomson Mason, who lived there many years. From 1913 to 1934, it was the home of the late Harley P. Wilson, director of the North American Co and also resident executive of the Electric Light & Street Railway Companies in Washington.

The original mansion house was destroyed by fire many years ago and the present one, built in 1920, was designed by the late Clark Waggaman, Washington architect. Included in the estate are a guest house, hot house, several garages, a swimming pool and an old spinning house.

The sale was conducted through Green and Magruder, Arlington Real Estate Co. N. C. Hines was the auctioneer.

Pile Drivers End Two-Day D. C. Strike

A handful of union pile drivers and laborers have been "prevailed upon" to return to their jobs Monday and thus end a short lived strike on a bulkhead construction project at the Washington Navy Yard.

Frank R. Howard, business agent of the A. F. of L. Carpenters and Joiners, said yesterday that he had met with the strikers and obtained their agreement to go back to work after losing less than two working days.

The men, seven pile drivers and about 20 laborers, left their jobs Wednesday in an inter-union dispute. The men were engaged on work being done by the Diamond Construction Co.

Meanwhile an attempt to open negotiations in the Arcade-Sunshine Laundry workers strike was made by Sam Levine, attorney for the Cleaners and Laundry Workers Union Local 188-B, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, C. I. O.

Levine stated that he sent a letter to the company yesterday asking for recognition of the union and offering to sit with a negotiating committee in an effort to settle the strike around a conference table.

He estimated that about 350 workers out of a total of 400 had walked out of the Arcade-Sunshine's plant and eight branch stores Wednesday after the company had allegedly refused a union offer to hold an NLRB-sponsored election to determine a bargaining unit. He blamed this action and "continued unfair labor practices" for the strike.

However, Alvin Newmyer, company attorney, said that Levine's estimate was "a little high," and that he believed only about 200 workers were out.

He also said that arrangements for an election were pending, and that a conference had been scheduled for next Tuesday with the NLRB in Baltimore in connection with a complaint of unfair labor practices originally filed with the board by the union on June 9.

"All these things were pending," he said, "when the strike came as a surprise. It will only be a matter of a few days before the men come back."

Cab Drivers Ask Zone I Be Reduced

Many Fear Rise In Operating Cost Due to Threatened Gasoline Shortage

A number of Washington cab drivers, fearful of increased operating expenses because of a threatened shortage of gasoline or an increase in prices, have petitioned the Public Utilities Commission for reduced limits in Zone 1, it was learned last night.

However, according to A. W. Crossley, executive secretary of the P. U. C., no action can be taken or hearings scheduled until "there is a Public Utilities Commission."

He pointed out that the Senate has failed to act on the nomination of Gregory Hankin to succeed Richmond B. Keech, and the term he was appointed for has expired. Keech was named Corporation Counsel. The White House also has failed to submit the name of a successor to Chairman Riley Elgen, who died some months ago.

Meter System Suggested

It was evident yesterday that there is considerable agitation among Washington "cabbies" to seek protection against possible heavy expenses due to anticipated gasoline problems.

There also has been a suggestion, said Crossley, that the city return to the meter system in order to give taximen a fair return on their operating expenses should gas prices rise as a result of the predicted shortage.

Crossley emphasized that the taxi industry as a whole has not requested the changes.

"The communications we have received are by far in the minority —there has been no general demands," he said.

Proposals Await Action

Pending action before the Utilities Commission are the cross-town bus proposal, the improvement of the bus transportation in the upper Sixteenth Street section, demands by the Capital Transit Co. for a "straight" 10-cent cash fare on the Takoma Park express route, disposition of the natural gas study as recommended in the Fisher report and valuation of the C. & P. Telephone Co.

Nothing can be done in these cases, it was pointed out, until action is taken to provide the District with a Public Utilities Commission.

Appointment Expires Before It's Confirmed

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the District Committee, yesterday discovered that he has been considering the nomination of a man while the term for which he was named has expired.

The man is Gregory Hankin, Federal Power Commission attorney, named last March by President Roosevelt to fill a vacancy in the District Public Utilities Commission. McCarran learned yesterday that Hankin was appointed for a term that expired Monday.

McCarran, chairman of a subcommittee named to study the confirmation of the nomination, withheld recommendation while the group studied reports on Hankin from the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Action was further delayed by the enforced absence from the city of Senator Warren E. Austin (Republican), of Vermont.

"It looks to me now as though the case has been taken out of our hands," commented McCarran. "There's no need for holding a post mortem."

'Miss American Legion'

Helen Pender, 21, graduate of McKinley High School, and secretary for M.-G.-M. here, was selected from among 40 candidates last night to win the title, "Miss American Legion." The contest, sponsored by the District Department of the American Legion, was staged aboard the S. S. Mount Vernon. Brunette Miss Pender represented the National Press Club Legion Post spoiled the show last year and also because, due to national demands, there may be no pyrotechnics next year.

July 4 Program to Warn Dictators

Thus, four patriotic symbols of a Glorious Fourth will emphasize for Washingtonians and all their fellow Americans that the United States can still enjoy a July Fourth at peace, but is prepared to defend the freedoms commemorated by that holiday.

Demonstration of Unity

The flag is not yet a battle standard. The President has not sounded a call to war. The anthem is not yet sung as a battle chant. The explosives are not 1,000-ton bombs. But the celebration this year has been planned to demonstrate that this country is united—and prepared.

Sparkplug of the Nation-wide celebration is dynamic Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, of New York, director of the Office of Civilian Defense. The O. C. D. has planned the ceremonies as a Nation-wide "grand rededication" to democracy.

It is hoped that holiday parties, wherever they may be, will turn on their radios at 4 o'clock and join in the patriotic observance: Listening to the President, repeating the oath and singing the anthem.

As LaGuardia has planned the observances, at the 4 o'clock radio signal ballgames will stop—even in the midst of a ninth inning rally with bases loaded; hikers with portable radios will halt in their tracks; beach parties will cluster around their receiving sets, and porch sitters will stop their rocking for a while to take part in the ceremonies.

Every radio station hooked to a network is expected to carry the brief national patriotic exercises. Chief Justice Stone will lead the speaking of the oath from his summer home in Estes Park, Colo.

Ceremonial guns in every Army post and camp will be fired 48 times in salute to the Union. Thousands of selectees will hear a 48-gun salute for the first time.

Despite the President's decree that Government workers must be back at their desks Saturday morning, there will be a heavy exodus from the city to vacation spots.

But there will be a full round of activities in Washington and the city is expected to be thronged by enough visitors to make up for the residents who leave town.

The fireworks show at the Monument will be preceded by an address by Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, associate justice-designate of the Supreme Court. Jackson's speech will be broadcast at 8:16 p. m.

The program will start at 7 p. m. with a concert by the Marine Band. A procession of flags and massing of colors, with some 300 veteran, patriotic, fraternal and civic organizations participating, will follow. After Jackson's address the fireworks will be displayed, part of a national outlayy of $3,500,000 for fireworks that will light the evening skies across the Nation.

Postoffices and other public buildings will be closed all day. There will be no mail deliveries. Major department stores will not be open for business until Monday, allowing their employes a three-day holiday.

As usual, thousands of Washingtonians will try to keep sand and flies out of thousands of picnic sandwiches. Among the picnics that have been planned is one at Fort Bayard Park, sponsored by the American University Park Citizens Association.

Seats for the celebration tonight at the Monument Grounds are 25 cents each. They have been on sale at American Automobile Association, Mayflower Hotel; Keystone Automobile Club, and will be sold at the Monument Grounds today.

Takoma Park residents will celebrate with a parade starting at 9:30 a. m. Senator Millard Tydings will speak at the end of the parade route at 11 a. m., at the Takoma Park Recreation Center.

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants will hold its traditional patriotic exercises, beginning at 10:30 a. m., in the old Union Engine House at Nineteenth and H Streets Northwest. The speaker will be Robert W. Horton, director of information, Office of Emergency Management.

FIRECRACKER DID THIS—Nolan Barrios, 18-year-old New Orleans high school athlete, was making one big firecracker from 30 little ones in preparation for celebrating the Fourth of July. His idea exploded prematurely and Barrios, shown being comforted by his sister, Mrs. Elane Bordelon, is in the hospital with his eyes burned and two fingers missing

75% Lose Draft Status Appeals Here

3 of 12 Receive Reclassification; 10 Cases Are Still Pending

A report of the District Selective Service Board of Appeals, which met on July 1, acting on 12 cases and holding over 10 others, showed that 75 per cent of the appealing registrants were retained in their original classifications, it was learned yesterday.

Of the 12 cases voted on, the report showed a total of 11 men who were classified by their local board as 1-A (available for military service) asking reclassification on grounds of either dependency or because of their occupation.

Three of the registrants in this group were reclassified—a painter, an unemployed man and an engineering aide in the American Automobile Association because of dependency. One junior highway engineer in the United States Public Roads Administration was given occupational deferment.

Occupations Vary

One registrant, a clerk in the Farm Security Administration asked that his classification of 1-A-O (available for military service, but not combatant duty) be changed to dependency deferment. He was retained in the 1-A-O group.

Among the occupations listed of those cases held over by the appeal board for future consideration were a cab driver, a clerk in the Office of Production Management, a clerk in the Social Security Board, a clerk in the War Department, a clerk in the Census Bureau, a clerk in the Civil Service Bureau, a stockkeeper in the Government Printing Office and a radio serviceman who wants his classification as a conscientious objector changed to deferment because of being an ordained minister.

Deferred Man Called

Meanwhile it was learned yesterday that Ernest J. Read, jr., of local draft board 24 in Anacostia has been ordered to report for induction into the Army next Tuesday. Read was deferred last December as a necessary man after his uncle by marriage, in whose print shop he worked, requested such deferment.

Because Read's father was a member of the board the deferment caused widespread comment in Anacostia and was finally reported to national draft headquarters. It was learned yesterday that local board 24 ordered Read's deferment to end on June 18 and that he has since been reclassified as 1-A. National draft headquarters said that Read's case was a difficult one and that there were facts to be weighed on both sides.

Catholic Daughters To Put Wreath On Tomb Today

Supreme Regent Mary C. Duffy, of the Catholic Daughters of America, will place a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier today at 10:30 a. m. Accompanied by other national officers, gathered in Washington for the nineteenth biennial convention of the organization, Miss Duffy then will go to Mount Vernon to pay similar honor to the Tomb of Washington.

Another preconvention feature will be the dedication of the library at the National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth Street Northwest, by the national board of the Catholic Daughters of America.

The convention banquet will be held in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel Monday evening. The next morning members will attend solemn pontifical mass at St. Matthew's Cathedral.

Library Receives Washington Panel, Britain's Gift

The Library of Congress announced yesterday that it had received, as a gift from the British government, the George Washington pedigree panel which was exhibited in the British pavilion at the New York World's Fair, 1939-1940. It has been hung in the library's genealogical reading room.

The pedigree is executed in brilliant colors on a large panel 7 feet high and 10 feet long. The lineage of George Washington is shown in gold and white letters on a field of green. It traces not only from King John himself but also from nine of the 25 barons who, in 1215 A. D. became sureties for John's execution of Magna Carta. The individual families which form the branches of George Washington's family tree in the 600 years from King John to the birth of the first President of the United States are represented

Institutions Share Katherine Noyes Estate

The will of Miss Katherine Noyes, of Takoma Park, Md., admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville, bequeaths $10,000 to the Old Ladies' Home of Burlington, Vt.; $5,000 to the Bennington Historical Society; cash ranging from $25 to $1,000 to 22 individuals and institutions, and the residue to the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation in memory of the testatrix's mother.

The instrument, which was executed July 21, 1938, names Clarence F. Donohoe, Milburn J. Donohoe and Charles T. Barber, executors. The total value of the estate is not indicated.

Patriotic Dance on Independence Eve

Sleeping Quarters Ready for Soldiers Here for Holiday

Faced with a heavy influx of service men over the holiday weekend, the District Defense Council last night announced sleeping places for men in uniform.

Quarters for the "Fourth" visit are as follows:

George Washington University gymnasium, 100 cots, 50 cents per night.

Soldiers', Sailors' and Marine Club, 1015 L Street Northwest, 150 cots, 50 cents per night.

Y. M. C. A., G Street branch, 50 cents per night (includes soap, towel and shower. Swimming 10 cents extra).

Although the "leave area" camp across Memorial Bridge in Virginia is still under construction, there are 60 cots available without charge. However, there are no bathing facilities.

The Bannecker Recreation House (colored) at 2400 Georgia Avenue Northwest, has 50 cots for 50 cents per night rental with shower facilities.

Frederick L. Pittman Found Dead in Hotel

A 71-year-old retired Patent Office employe was found dead in a downtown hotel room yesterday afternoon, after he had joined a grandniece in clebrating her birthday.

Lefty Grove Wins 299th Game, Beats Athletics

Bosox Hurler Outpitched By Dean

One More for Mose Will Make Him 12th Man to Win 300; Dean Allows 6 Hits

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 3.—Robert Moses Grove won his 299th game today as he pitched the Boston Red Sox to a 5-to-2 victory over the Athletics. One more triumph for Old Mose and he'll be the twelfth pitcher in major league history to hit the coveted 300 mark.

Jim Tabor's three-run double in the first inning gave Grove a hefty lead and Ted William's two-run homer in the eighth sewed up the ball game.

A gust of mind and shortstop Al Brancato's dreaminess set up Boston's big first inning. After Lou Finney had singled, Williams batted a high fly in left center which the wind blew back into Brancato's territory. Brancato didn't see it and it went for another single. Jimmy Foxx then walked and Tabor's double cleared the bases.

Allows 10 Hits

The Athletics' got their two scores in the sixth when Dick Siebert tripled, Sam Chapman and Pete Suder singled and Chubby Dean batted out a long fly.

Dean, who went the route for the A's, outpitched his 41-year-old southpaw adversary from Lonaconing, Md. He gave up just six hits, while his mates were getting 10 off Grove.

But aside from the second inning when he cut loose with a wild pitch, Old Mose showed perfect control when the A's had men on base, and he gave no walks.

A ladies' day crowd of 6,000 gave the veteran of 16 seasons in the big leagues a great hand when he left the mound. It was the sixth victory against two defeats this season for Grove who spent nine years with the Athletics and the last seven with the Red Sox.

Louis Marital Strife Nears Turning Point

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 3.—Friends of Joe Louis disclosed here today that the marital woes of the heavyweight boxing champion, whose wife filed suit for divorce yesterday in Chicago, might be climaxed by a reconciliation.

This was hinted after long-distance telephone conversations with Mrs. Louis, who was quoted as saying she filed the divorce action "in a moment of anger—but I didn't want to harm Joe."

Horse Show First

Mrs. Louis, her friends said, explained her anger on the grounds that her famous husband failed to keep a promise to return home last week after attending a horse show in Cleveland.

In Chicago, the heavyweight champion's wife said that she and her husband "are very friendly, really we are."

"We got along beautifully up to the first of the year, but Joe was just too busy for a family life—or at least he used that as an excuse. I guess his busines just wasn't conducive to making a home."

Louis called off a golfing trip to Pittsburgh and went into seclusion at his Utica, Mich., farm ranch. He had denied he ever struck his wife, as she contended, and had said he would not contest the divorce action.

Alabama Coed Wins College Women's Golf

Columbus, Ohio, July 3.—Eleanor Dudley, of Chicago, 1941 graduate of the University of Alabama, tonight wore the crown in the first Intercollegiate Women's Golf Championship play.

Miss Dudley, 23 years old, former Illinois State and Western Junior champion, won the title today in the tournament finals by defeating Eddell Wortz of Fort Smith, Ark., a Stephens College freshman, 4 and 2.

The Illinois girl rallied from three down at the end of the first three holes to reach the ninth green all even, and then won the tenth, eleventh, twelfth and the sixteenth for the match and the championship. She was one under par for the 16 holes. Both girls toured the front nine in 40, one under par.

After Miss Dudley received the championship trophy, Ohio State University officials announced that the Women's Intercollegiate would be held on the university course again next year. The tourney will start June 22 and probably will run a full week, depending on the size of the entry list.

Ex-Banana Seller Buys Country Club At Public Auction

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 3.—Exclusive Midwick Country Club, for years the playground of wealthy socialites, was sold at public auction today to a former banana peddler.

Long known as the polo center of the West, the club with its 210 acres, golf course, tennis courts, etc., went under the hammer for $178,000.

It was sold after spirited bidding between a combination of members anxious to save it, and Dominic Jebbia, an Italian immigrant who made a fortune out of bananas—but never became rich enough to become a member of Midwick.

Cobuyer was the 55-year-old fruit merchant's son, Norf, who observed: "No, I don't belong to the club—I never could afford to."

Jebbia, who owns a mansion overlooking the golf course, said he had no plans for the property except to "go up to the club and have a swim." He came to this country when he was 6. From a humble street peddler he prospered through the years, most of them in Wheeling W. Va. He came to Los Angeles in 1925.

Travis Wins 60-Day Deferment From Draft

Georgia Draft Board Curtails 90-Day Request by a Third

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, July 3.—Shortstop Cecil Travis, of the Nats, has won a 60-day deferment in the Selective Service draft, The Post learned today.

Travis asked his Fayette, Ga., draft board for a 90-day deferment that would enable him to finish the season, but it was curtailed to 60 days.

His draft board previously had advised Travis that his number would be called "within a very few days."

Travis' deferment will carry into late August, with the posisbility that he will not be called up unless the Nation goes to war. Legislation now pending in Congress provides for indefinite deferment of all registrants when they reach the age of 28. Travis will be 28 on August 11.

Travis today is the third leading hitter in the American League with an average of .364.

Borican Takes Three Events In Decathlon

By the Associated Press

Bridgeton, N. J., July 3.—Long John Borican started a new chapter of the local boy makes good story today when he won three of five events to lead the race for the National A. A. U. decathlon championship at the half-way mark.

The Negro athlete, a graduate of Bridgeton High School and now competing for the Asbury Park (N. J.) A. C., compiled 3,407 points for a comfortable margin over three rivals.

Uyval C. Jones, of the University of Michigan, held second place with 3,282 points; Joshua Williamson, of Newark, N. J., former Xavier College, New Orleans, star, was third with 3,251, and Howard Jensen, of Temple University, was fourth with 2,763.

Archie Harris, Indiana University's national discus champion from Ocean City, N. J., dropped out of the meet at the end of four events after totaling 2,299 points. Harris won the shot put with a heave of 44 feet 4 inches.

Borican, holder of the world's 600-yard and 1,000-yard records, and a former National A. A. U. Pentathlon champion, won the 100-meter dash in 11.3 seconds, followed with another first in the broad jump with a leap of 21 feet 7 inches, and captured the 400-meter dash in 51 seconds.

Jones took first honors in the high jump, clearing 5 feet 10¾ inches, to beat out Williamson who last week leaped 6 feet 5 inches in the National A. A. U. Championship meet. Williamson's best today was 5 feet 9½ inches.

The championship will be decided tomorrow with competition in the 110-meter hurdles, discus throw, pole vault, javelin and 1,500-meter run.

Zivic Gets $6,217 For TKO of Al Davis

New York, July 3 (AP).—Fritzie Zivic, welterweight champion, today received a check of $6,217.21 for his ten-round technical knockout of Al (Bummy) Davis in their nontitle bout at the Polo Grounds last night.

Davis' share was $4,352.0. Jacobs also had guaranteed the Army Relief Fund $10,000.

Trois Pistoles Wins Empire Turf Feature

By the Associated Press

Empire City Race Track, Yonkers, N. Y., July 3.—More modern and immaculate than ever since the expenditure of $700,000 this season and last for improvements, the Yonkers, track, under the direction of its portly new president, George Bull, today threw open its gates for a 21-day meeting, which was ushered in under leaden skies. The afternoon was marked by upsets, one of them coming in the featured Irvington purse.

This event saw R. Sterling Clark's French-bred 4-year-old. Trois Pistoles, scoring an easy victory at odds of $49.50 for $2. Unable to win in 11 previous attempts covering 1940 and this season, the long shot prevailed by a length and a half, running the mile and a sixteenth in 1:45 under Ruperto Donoso.

Leigh Taliaferro's hard-luck gelding, Bright Gallant, finished second for the sixth time in a row. He was favorite at 55 cents on the dollar and barely got up to head J. T. Maloney's Grebe for the place. In his previous effort, Bright Gallant had finished second to Robert Morris in Belmont's Peter Pan Handicap.

Rain Dampens Card

Just before the feature, a gray filly named Miss Goshen took the fourth contest at odds of $189.10 for $2. Bright Gallant was the fifth losing choice in as many races and the form players, still groggy from a good going-over at Aqueduct, were feeling pretty hopeless.

A drizzling rain began falling after the headliner. At the same time, attendance was announced as 9,621 and a statement arrived from President Bull, who said: "It was a fine opening, considering the morning rain and the eve of a big holiday. I believe we will have one of the greatest meetings Empire ever has had. We intend doing our utmost to furnish the best sport possible."

Trois Pistoles was admirably rated by Donso while Grebe and Grasshopper II raced heads apart for the lead into the stretch. The Frenchman then gained with every stride and easily ran over the faster beginners as Bright Gallant's late bid came just in time for second position.

Ward Rallies To Beat Bliss On 18th Hole

By the Associated Press

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 3.—Rallying courageously in the face of what seemed sure defeat, Defending Champion Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Spokane, Wash., swept the final four holes to beat Rodney Bliss, of Omaha, 1 up, in the Western Amateur Golf Tournament's first round today.

Behind from the eighth hole until he squared the match on the 589-yard seventeenth at peak-lined Broadmoor, the strong-armed Ward rolled home in 69 strikes, one under par, to Bliss' 70.

Earlier, Medalist Harry Todd, of Dallas, Western titlist two years ago, erased Lyman Wright, of Colorado Springs, 7 and 6, shooting one over par.

Ward, national amateur king in 1939, triumphed with a birdie three on the 449-yard eighteenth, a lake hole. He poked a beautiful iron within 5 feet of the pin. After Bliss missed his 25-footer, Ward tapped in his ball for the victory.

Bliss, runnerup for the Western at Broadmoor six years ago, caught up with Ward at the sixth hole with a birdie three and won the eighth with a birdie and the ninth with a par to Ward's troublesome five, to make a two-hole lead at the turn.

On the second nine Ward collected birdies on the tenth, twelfth, sixteenth and eighteenth holes but lost the short thirteenth by three-putting. Bliss took a three-hole lead at the fourteenth, only to crumple before the champion's stretch rally.

Ruddy-faced Chick Evans, of Chicago, the "Mr. Golf" of this tournament, fell 4 and 3, before the subpar shooting of freckled Morris Norton, of Wichita Falls, Tex. Chick, playing in his thirty-fourth Western and eight times champion, said, "I shot the best golf I was capable of but that boy Norton was too good."

Greenberg Likes Army Experience; Treats Soldiers

By International News Service

Fort Custer, Mich., July 3.—Hank Greenberg, who gave up a $50,000 yearly salary with the Detroit Tigers when he was inducted into the Army at $21 a month, was back in camp tonight after participating in the "Battle of Tennessee" war maneuvers.

Hank said he was well pleased with his Army experience, adding: "I don't know how the boys on foot felt about it, but I enjoyed the maneuvers. You see, I ride on a truck on the marches because our unit is motorized."

Hank's buddies said he must have saved a few bucks from his 1940 salary, for practically all of his $21 Army pay went for "treating" his fellow soldiers.

Game Honors Memory of Lou Gehrig

July 4th Crowd Out To See Joe DiMaggio Stretch Streak; Sale Sets New Record

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, July 3.—The Nats take their four-game losing streak into Yankee Stadium tomorrow, for better or worse, and a goodly crowd will be there. The combination of Fourth of July, the unveiling of the Lou Gherig memorial, and Joe DiMaggio's unbroken 45-game hitting streak has produced the largest advance sale in Yankee Stadium history.

At least 70,000 fans are expected, and any mauling the Nats may take will be assuaged to a considerable extent by the visitors' share of the gate receipts.

The league-leading Yanks when last seen by the Nats were in the act of beating them a doubleheader at Griffith Stadium. On that occasion they knocked Sid Hudson and Dutch Leonard out of the box. Manager Bucky Harris has shifted his pitching program for tomorrow's affair. Hudson will face the Yankees, but Leonard won't.

Lost the Touch

Harris is withholding Leonard who, it seems, has been licked the last nine times he has faced the Yankees in the past two years. Back in 1939, the big Dutchman was the only pitcher to beat the Yanks four times, but he has lost the magic touch and Harris is replacing him with Ken Chase, who has been pitching the best ball on the Washington club.

Chase, whose last effort was a 12-inning scoreless job against Boston before he retired, says he has recovered from a blister on the middle finger of his pitching hand.

Manager Joe McCarthy will start Red Ruffing in one of the games, with the prospect that Steve Peek will pitch the other for the Yankees.

Tablet to Be Unveiled

Before the games, players of both teams and Yankee officials will participate in the tribute to the late Lou Gehrig. Ceremonies will be held in center field, where a tablet to Gehrig's memory will be unveiled.

Yankee fans are still highly exand it has almost transcended in imcited by DiMaggio's hitting streak portance everything else that occurs in Yankee Stadium. The big Frisco slugger says the tension is eased with the record broken, but he is in no mood to end his streak.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, July 3.—Another reason why the Yankees will probably win the pennant is Joe DiMaggio. The utterly colorless DiMag, who is anything but a flaming personality, has the Yanks whooped up to a fiery pitch. They're rallying around him and his batting streak with a zest that has taken them far out in front.

POVICH

Manager Joe McCarthy was saying today that he doubted if any Yankee team in his memory was fired up to the extent of the 1941 Yankees, and he pointed a significant finger at DiMaggio as he spoke. "There's the fellow who is taking us places," said McCarthy. "The men on this club love him. They've been rooting for him so hard during these last 45 games he has hit in that they can't help playing better ball."

All during his record-breaking batting streak, DiMaggio's Yankee pals have been feeling a personal responsibility for keeping it going, one Yank told us today. "There were days when it looked as if Joe wasn't going to get his hit in the late innings, and we were up there to make his batting turn come around again. Every guy walked up to the plate determined to save DiMag's time at bat."

DiMag got plenty of cooperation from McCarthy during his streak, he took pains to point out. "Joe McCarthy deserves a share in that record," DiMaggio said. "He was with me all the way. When I got up to around 34 or 35 games on this streak I wanted to keep it going, and it began to get tough. McCarthy gave me all sorts of help. He let me hit three-and-nothing pitches when it would have been better baseball to take a walk."

Joe Preferred Shower to Senator Johnson

McCarthy's most generous act, though, was during the week in which DiMaggio did set the record. Joe was hitless until his last time at bat, and the score was tied. One was out, and Rolfe was on first base. There was more than a faint chance that DiMaggio might not get another turn at bat. If Tommy Henrich grounded into a double play, DiMag's streak might end.

What McCarthy did was to give Henrich the sacrifice sign to eliminate any possibility of a double play and assure DiMag another shot at the record. Henrich did sacrifice and Joe stepped up in the clutch to get his hit.

There was an ugly story making the rounds in Washington last week when news photographers reported that DiMaggio, after tying the record of George Sisler in the opening game of the Griffith Stadium doubleheader on Sunday, refused to pose with Senator Hiram Johnson of California. The cameramen, reckoning that Senator Johnson was from DiMag's home town of Frisco, deemed it a likely picture. DiMaggio, however, did not consent to pose.

We asked Joe about that incident today. He could have made a face-saving denial and tossed the story back in the photographers laps, but he didn't.

"That's right," said Joe, "I didn't pose with Senator Johnson when they asked me. I was wringing wet and tired and I told those cameramen I wanted to get a shower first. When I came out of the dugout after the shower, I guess they were sore with me and wouldn't ask me to pose again.

Just Can't Go Show-Boating

"I should have gone right over and shook hands with Senator Johnson, I guess," DiMaggio said, "but I don't mind telling you, I'm a bashful guy. I can't go show-boating around like a lot of ball players. It just isn't in me."

Joe's frank admission that he is a bashful guy was sincere enough, and he probably recognizes the fact that it is costing him dough. If he owned a bit of color along with his ability, neither Bob Feller nor Buck Newsom would be the highest salaried player in the big leagues. That honor would belong to DiMaggio who, if he were a bit of a showboat, would be the best drawing-card in the big leagues.

The chances are, incidentally, that DiMag will be the top-salaried man in baseball next year anyway. Already his sensational batting feats have accounted for at least $50,000 additional in the Yankee coffers due to the crowds he has pulled. His presence in Washington last Sunday was responsible for at least 10,000 of the 31,000 admissions, and the Yankee-Red Sox doubleheader in New York the other day would scarcely have drawn half of the 52,000 it did draw with DiMaggio shooting at Willie Keeler's record.

He'll have the best salary argument of any man in baseball at contract signing time next spring.

Cubs' Unearned Runs Beat St. Louis, 2-1

Cardinals Crack Defensively, Fall Into Tie With Dodgers for First; 'Experiment' Fails

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 3.—The St. Louis Cardinals cracked defensively today, and the Chicago Cubs scored two unearned runs behind Claude Passeau's five-hit pitching to win, 2-1.

The defeat dropped the Cardinals into a tie with the idle Brooklyn Dodgers for first place.

The Cubs scored in the fourth when Johnny Hopp dropped Clyde McCullough's fly ball in left field. Nicholson shoved the burly catcher to third and he counted on an infield out. The other run scored when Second Baseman Frank Crespi failed to handle Lou Stringer's ground ball in the seventh. Passeau singled him home after a sacrifice had sent him to second.

The Cardinals scored in the eigth on singles by Pinchhitter Coaker, Triplett and Crespi.

The victory was the third in 12 games for the Cubs, who have scored only nine earned runs in their last 95 innings.

The Cubs made only five hits off Pitcher Max Lanier despite the $1,000 experiment of the club in clearing a large section of the bleachers which batters long have complained prevented them from "following" the ball because of white shirt fronts.

Pat Mullin, Tiger Outfielder, Goes Under the Knife

Chicago, July 3.—Pat Mullin, the Detroit Tigers' hard-hitting young outfielder, underwent an operation today which the staff of the University of Chicago clinic reported would probably keep him out of the game for the rest of the season.

Mullin, who was playing center field in place of the injured Barney McCosky and hitting the ball at a .345 pace, dislocated his right shoulder in a game with the Chicago White Sox last night, when he collided with Bill Dietrich, White Sox pitcher, at first base.

The superintendent of Billing Hospital said an open reduction was necessary when it was discovered that Mullin's collar bone was separated at the point of the shoulder. The bone will be held in place with wires.

Suffolk Downs' Yankee Cap Tops Turf Program Today

Hollywood Race Draws Challedon

Two Stakes Scheduled At Empire City; Over $100,000 to Be Distributed

By the United Press

More than 200,000 Americans will spend their Fourth of July holiday watching the Nation's top-flight thoroughbred horses vie for $100,000 in stake purses at ten different race courses in a brilliant program spread over eight States.

The day's features will be topped by the $25,000 Yankee Handicap at Suffolk Downs in New England and by the $20,000 American Handicap at Hollywood Park in California. Additionally, at least one important event will be offered in every section which patronizes the turf.

The Yankee Handicap, a mile and three-sixteenth feature to be contested on a probably fast track before some 40,000 persons, has attracted almost every crack 3-year-old in the country. Our Boots, who has not started since the Preakness, will carry high weight of 122 pounds.

They are the stake winners, Robert Morris and Market Wise, both at 101; Yankee Chance, 110; Nasca, 111; Swing and Sway, 116; Blue Pair, 117; Crowfoot, 110, and Boston Man, 113. One of the top three horses is expected to be favored and a stiff tussle is anticipated.

Challedon Returns to Turf Wars

The American Handicap, last big prep for the $75,000 Gold Cup, marks the return to competition of Challedon, horse of the years of 1939 and 1940. The Maryland-bred will be sent against the two big horses of the winter, Mioland, winner of four stakes at Santa Anita, and Big Pebble, victor in the $50,000 Widener Cup at Hialeah.

Challendon will carry 126 pounds along with Mioland while Big Pebble, an entry with Ship Biscuit, 105, and Get Off, 115, will tote 117. Other weights are the entry of King Torch 104 and Sir Jeffrey, 111; the entry of No Competition, 115, and Woof Woof, 114; Mount Vernon II, 106; Royal Crusader, 105; Sweepida, 114, and Mr. Grundy, 105. The distance is a mile and an eighth, the track fast and the anticipated crowd 40,000.

Meanwhile at Arlington Park in Chicago an unexpectedly large field of 15 horses entered the $10,000 Stars and Stripes Handicap at a mile and an eighth on another fast track. Shot Put took high weight of 118 pounds to carry against Afghanistan, 100; Swain, 100; Viscounty, 116; Gallahadion, 116; Equifox, 114; Sun Lover, 112; Third Covey, 111; Steel Heels, 110; the entry of Joe Schenck, 110, and Technician; the entry of Upstream, 108, and War Ministrel, 106; Dandy Fox, 104, and Olympus, 102.

Two Stakes at Empire City

Another good card is on tap at Empire City in New York where fields of 12 were drawn for the $5,000 Demoiselle Stakes and the $5,000 Questionnaire Handicap. The former, a 6-furlong sprint for juvenile fillies, is topped by War Melody who carries 115 pounds against Small Time, the entry of Bellcoda and Ration at the same weight; Weep Not, Picture Hat, Mersa Matruh, Last Sou and Smiles at 111, and Jane Blenheim, Generous and Pigtails at 107.

The Questionnaire, a mile and 1-16 contest for older horses, was filled with Foxbrough, 122; Parasang, 121; Royal Man, 112; Quakertown, 106; Selalbeda, 100; the entry of Century Note, 105; and Red Dock, 114; Gramps, 109; Cacodemon, 108; Bosley, 109; Attention, 110, and Counterglow, 107. Rain was forecast last night although the track was fast.

At Delaware Park the feature is the $5,000 Christiana Stakes for 2-year-olds at 5-and-a-half furlongs. Joe Ray is top-weight at 125 in a field which includes Troon, 113; and Arthur C., the entry of Coochs Bridge and Elder; Cassis, Sir Counsellor, Grey Wing, Air Current and Pomway, all at 116. The probable footing will be muddy.

At Detroit the $2,500 Liberty Handicap at 6 furlongs is the best of three features. Wise Moss, an entry with Fairly Fly, 95, was top-weighted at 119 pounds with a fast track in sight. The field is composed of High One, 105; Stemwinder, 110; Darby Dienst, 106, and Burgoo Miss, 113.

Virginians Point With Pride to Own Sire Blenheim

This hot weather is apt to make any yearling feel scratchy, so these two fillies give each other a bit of assistance as they are turned out on pasture at J. S. Phipps' Blenheim Farm, near The Plains, Va. The young lady on the far side is a full sister to the race horse, Sun Egret, by Sun Briar

And here is Blenheim, himself, taking an afternoon tour of his paddock before settling down to eat grass.

Kentucky's Blenheim II Outshines Namesake But Old Dominion Stallion Also Held Highly

(This is the fourteenth in a series of articles by Miss Hagner concerning horse breeding farms in this area.—Editor.)

By Anne Hagner

The fact that there are two stallions named Blenheim in America today has caused no end of confusion among horse-minded folk; at the mention of the name, Virginians immediately think of the American Blenheim, now standing at J. S. Phipps' Blenheim Farm near The Plains, Va. Kentuckians, on the other hand, know more of the imported Blenheim II, at Arthur B. Hancock's Claiborne Farm.

Fortunately for the honor of each, an admirer of one cannot reasonably overlook the record of the other. Kentucky's is the most famous—his 14 offspring, racing on various tracks last year, won $89,755. Phipps' stallion, with seven colts racing, won $20,612. Both are by the English horse, Blandford.

Although Blenheim (the Virginian) ranks second in monetary achievements, he is definitely the head man on the big farm that now bears his name. His best colt to date, Blensign, upheld family honors in 1940 by winning the Ral Parr Stakes at Pimlico, the Dover Stakes at Delaware Park, and by placing second in the Christiana Stakes, also at Delaware. These carryings-on and several other less important victories gave the youngster a total of $13,650 for Owner H. G. Bedwell.

Has Spacious Stall

As for the stallion himself, he has one of the most spacious abodes in Virginia; his stall is so large, in fact, that he has plenty of room to exercise in it if he so desires. The building containing it is painted a cool-looking green, as are all the other stables on the farm, and is surrounded by acres of paddock in which Blenheim roams at night.

Because he is exceptionally well-mannered for a stallion, he is turned out frequently, rather than exercised under saddle. Apparently realizing the purpose of this freedom, Blenheim trots patiently about the outer edges of his paddock, kicks playfully for a moment at a polo stallion in a nearby field, and then relaxes to eat grass.

At 13, the pride of the Phipps' farm has been bred to an excellent collection of mares, many of them representing the highly regarded Sun Briar and Sun Beau lines of Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Court Manor stock. Best of the Phipps-owned matrons is a good looking chestnut, Sun Rouge, by Sun Briar, who has at her side a foal by Imported Gino.

Blandford, English sire of the two Blenheims, has four English Derby winners to his credit—Blenheim II, Trigo, Windsor Lad, and Bahram. The Virginia-owned Blenheim's dam, also imported, was named Flying Squadron, and won the Duke of York Stakes and the Houghton Handicap in England.

Much of Blenheim's career was occupied with chasing home a very fair sort of horse—Twenty Grand, to whom he placed second in the Dwyer Stakes and the Jockey Club Gold Cup. He did manage to win a bit, however; as a 4-year-old he took the Brooklyn, Empire City, Brookdale, Aqueduct and Edgemere Handicaps and the Whitney Gold Cup at 1⅛ miles, beating mate as decisively as he had done in the Brooklyn the year before.

Prize filly on the farm is another product of the Kilmer sale, a $5,500 yearling by Sun Briar out of Polly Egret who is expected to carry the Phipps colors next year. She is a full sister to Sun Egret.

Another Court Manor importation in the cool L-shaped barn is Pharahawk, a daughter of Pharamond with an inquisitive little colt by Sun Briar. Of the 15 other matrons, all have sucklings sired by well-known Eastern stallions.

Jockey Pearson Rides 5 Winners, Ties Mark

Los Angeles, July 3 (AP).—Jockey Billy Pearson tied the Hollywood Park record today by hitting the winner's circle five times in the eight races in which he rode.

The feat equaled the performance of little Silvio Coucci in 1938.

Pearson, leading jockey at the meeeting, started out by taking the first two races, one on a 20-to-1 shot, Tripaway. He piloted Sun Home to win the fourth, and followed with Winnamucca in the fifth. In the seventh he came in with Justice M., the favorite.

He was shut out in the third, sixth and eighth.

Culpeper Show Draws Heavy D. C. Entry

By a Staff Correspondent

Culpeper, Va., July 3.—Strongest Washington representative in a Virginia show this season will be seen at the Culpeper Horse Show and races, which begin a two-day stand here tomorrow.

From the District and its immediate environs will come Margaret Cotter with Rocksie and Rocksette, a 4-year-old mare who will be making her debut in large shows; Charles Fletcher with Nanette, Eddie Talbert with Crusoe and Good Friday, U. S. Randle with Troop, Gee Ray Bee and Randle's Shadow; Blanche Johnson with Good Times, and several jumpers from the Fort Myer Horse Show team.

Others to show include Mrs. M. E. Whitney, whose Spring Hope was hunter champion of the Front Royal Horse Show last week; Meander Farm's top 3-year-old, Mathematician, titlist in the juvenile divisions at both Upperville and Front Royal; Mrs. D. N. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, Dr. Lewis M. Allen, Peach Brothers, Ted Floyd, Eileen Brent; Pine Brook Farm with O'Doc, a flashy 3-year-old; Betty Ray Bartmeier, George H. Van Devanter, Nancy Haas, Capt. and Mrs. J. G. Minniece, jr., Lieut. W. D. Rand, jr., and Amory Lawrence.

Beginning at 9:15 tomorrow, the card calls for lead-in events, three pony outings, 12 hunter classes, four for open jumpers, and the popular quartet of races, three on the flat and one over the steeplechase course.

Judges will be Thomas Assheton, of New York; Lieut. Col. James B. Duke, of Washington; Forrest L. Ward, of Hollins, Va., and Homer B. Gray, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

An additional race will be run off Saturday afternoon, when Culpeper horses and Culpeper County riders will compete over part of the 2½-mile steeplechase course.

Headley's Alaking Is Suffolk Downs Race Winner

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 3.—The silks of Hal Price Headley, Kentucky owner and breeder, which have dominated Suffolk Downs' long meeting, went to the masthead today for the thirteenth time when Walter Lee Taylor, Houston hurricane, scored with Alaking, a home-bred, in the Waban, $1,500 mile for 3-year-olds in Grade C.

Only a neck out front, the Equipose colt's rush over the final 150 yards wiped out a grand battle among W. J. Hirsch's Tragic Ending, 9-5 favorite; Maplecrest Farm's General Jack and Marshall Fields' Boiled Shirt.

Taylor waited with Alaking, came up on the outside when the other three were deadlocked. Tragic Ending took the place a nose in front of Boiled Shirt, which had a length on General Jack. Eight went.

The winner ran the mile in 1:38 and paid $16.60, $7 and $4.80. Tragic Ending paid $4 and $3, while Boiled Shirt paid $4 to show.

No Dates Carded For Florida Races, Officials Adjourn

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., July 3.—Florida's racing commission adjourned a three-day meeting here today without acting on a request for an investigation of Tropical Park at Miami.

A commission announcement said dates for horse races would be announced later, but did not say when. It made no mention of the Tropical Park investigation requested by State Senator Ernest Graham and Attorney John Prunty, both Miamians who said they spoke for old-age pension groups.

The commission denied the application of the Daytona Beach Jockey Club for a permit to build and operate a horse race track in Volusia County.

Get Out That Old Shoebox Lunch

New York, July 3.—This column is written to be stuffed in the shoebox lunch, to keep the olive jar from batting its brains out against the salt shaker. This is a July 4 piece, and its purpose is utilitarian rather than inspirational. It will serve to wrap up wet bathing suits, for the long ride home, to spread out on the park lawns, and for all the other classic reasons. For people are much too busy shoving one another off the roads, to read about sports.

CONSIDINE

No sense, therefore, wasting all the precious tid-bits of information that have rattled restlessly in us (we hope it's information) for days, seeking expression.

No sense commenting on the inequality of a system that enables Pvt. Bummy Davis, a former bad actor, to get six weeks furlough from Army camp, and yet won't permit Pvt. Hank Greenberg to play in the All Star game. The All Star game will give almost its entire gate receipts to USO, while the fight gave only a comparatively small bite.

With our audience cut to sixty or seventy million, what's the use of telling you that if the Dodgers win the Pennant they won't hire the Yankee Stadium to play in? If any switch is made it will be to the Polo Grounds, for Ed Barrow won't be one to welcome a National League club into his park, and thus make National League fans out of his customers.

And Not Speaking of Louis-Nova . . .

This might have been a good day to pose the question as to which is the greater streak—DiMaggio's or Ben Hogan's. DiMaggio carried a 45-game skein into tomorrow's double-header at the Stadium. Hogan finished in the money in his fiftieth straight golf tournament last week. Both are tremendous records. Fred Corcoran, of the P. G. A., says that Hogan's is the superior feat. "You gotta hit against Bobby Feller every day in that golf league," Fred says.

No sense spilling, on a day like this, that ticket orders for the Louis-Nova fight are coming into Mike Jacobs office in bundles, though the site of the fight has not been officially decided, nor the date. This fight will draw a gate because it will be the first time since the second Schmeling fight that people will buy a ticket to see Louis beaten, not to see him win from a foredoomed opponent.

This might have been a good day to write a long piece stating flatly that this year we solemnly pledge not to speak of Frankie Parker's new forehand drive. You can always tell that it's Independence Day by long stories revealing the stirring news that Frankie Parker has a new forehand. The bloke is always getting a new forehand, and one's as bad as the other. We have a feeling that the world is going to get "louisier" with increasing rapidity, and that Parker's gallant contribution to the four freedoms, his new forehand grip, will do little to change the tide of inhuman events. That's all, brother.

Like a Will Reading Yet

Too bad we couldn't write a story about a great polo match to be played tomorrow near New York. It will be so much for the benefit of USO that the players will pay to get in it. Tickets sell for a buck and for fifty cents. The best players in the world will be on hand—Stewart Iglehart, Cecil Smith, Ebby Gerry, Mike Phipps and Pete Bostwick, who range from 10 goal ratings to seven. To be in that class you've got to be a superb horseman, have more shots than a combined golfer and tennis player, and possess the gumption of a blocking halfback.

We had planned this day to write something to the effect that the teams in first place in the Big Leagues on July 4 usually win the Pennant. But we want everybody present—as in the reading of a will—before we let loose that bombshell. Hmm, that would make a Yankee-Cardinal series. We'd rather see a Yankee-Dodger, Indian-Dodger or Dodger-Red Sox series. Our first love in the National League, the Reds, are in the same fix as their Soviet namesakes, with about as much chance of recapturing the top as the Reds have of recapturing Minsk.

This all could have been about Lou Gehrig, and the fine thing the Yankee ball players are going to do in his memory tomorrow afternoon at the stadium. The Yanks themselves thought up the idea of the tablet and asked no contribution from the Yankee front office. We think it's a fitting tribute to Lou, from the men who knew and loved him.

D. C. Firemen Play 6 Games in 2 Days

The D. C. Fire Department softball ten will play six games in two days as they meet a Cape Charles (Va.) team in a doubleheader this afternoon, travel to Parksley, Va., for a twin bill tonight, and go on to Portsmouth, Va., tomorrow to play the Norfolk Navy Yard, champions of the State, in two more games.

Sergt. McKee Springs Upset In Pistol Shoot

Special Dispatch to The Post

Camp Ritchie, Md.—Sergt. Sheldon McKee, pistol instructor for the Washington Metropolitan force, and a veteran pistol competitor, scored a surprising victory here today as nearly 400 shooters opened fire in the Eastern small bore rifle and pistol championships.

McKee, an unranked competitor, beat a host of celebrated masters, including Walter Walsh of Washington with his score of 179 out of 200 in the .45 caliber slow-fire match. Walsh preparing for defense of his Eastern regional pistol championship starting tomorrow, already has two titles in individual matches.

He won the center-fire Camp Perry course with 294 out of 300 and the police championship over the National match course with 289 out of 300.

Wilbur Slack, D. C. policeman, was second to Walsh in the Camp Perry course event with 292, and won high expert honors in the .45-caliber timed fire match, scoring 192x200. John B. Layton, also a D. C. policeman, was high expert in center-fire Camp Perry match.

On the eve of an attempt to win his third successive title, Walsh displayed high form today by winning the first two individual matches.

The sharpshooting G-man's score of 294x300 took the center-fire Camp Perry match. His mark of 289x300 won the police championship over the national match course.

Steady rain and wind failed to dampen the spirit of a large field of Eastern target shooting experts who officially opened the championships. While today's firing was preliminary to the National Rifle Association aggregate events starting tomorrow, nearly all of the 400 expected entries were in camp.

George P. Sheldon, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., scored the day's big upset in the Eastern short-range event, winning with a 400-34X score. The veteran rifleman beat Russ Perry, Walnut Port, Pa., by a single X.

Mako, Kramer Move Up In Clay Play

By the Associated Press

New York, July 3.—The Eastern clay court tennis tournament was halted by rain for the third straight day today, but not before four Californians and a New Yorker had advanced to quarter final and semi-final berths in the men's and women's divisions.

Gene Mako and Jackie Kramer, of Los Angeles, reached the round of eight with straight set victories over another pair of Westerners. Mako eliminated Bill Canning, of Hidden Valley, Calif., 6—2, 6—3, while Kramer defeated Bill Decker of Reno, 6—3, 7—5. Before meeting Kramer, Decker won from Dick Seeler, of Bellerose, N. Y., 7—5, 2—6, 6—3.

The only local player in the successful group was Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, who reached the lower bracket semi-final with a 6—1, 6—1 over Argyll Rice, of Hartford, Conn. She will meet Pat Canning, of Hidden Valley, who scored over Mrs. Louise Raymond Ganzenmuller, of Scarsdale, N. Y., 6—1, 6—4.

Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, earned the right to face defending Champion Virginia Wolfenden in the upper bracket semi-final when she defeated Helen Germaine, of New York, 6—3, 6—2. Miss Wolfenden, another San Franciscan, went into the semi-final round yesterday.

44th Wins Over 29th, 5-2, at Meade

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 3.—Without making a hit in the inning, the Forty-fourth Division scored three runs in the sixth today to defeat the Twenty-ninth Division's baseball team, 5 to 2, in a seven-inning contest.

The Fort Dix, N. J., outfit got across their three counters on two walks and a hit batter by Pitcher Elmere Wright, who had relieved Louis Thuman, and by a passed ball. Thuman had allowed only four hits and three walks in five innings.

The Twenty-ninth Division got its first score in the opening frame when Second Baseman Maurice Jacobs doubled to send in George Buckless from first. In the fifth inning Jacobs batted in Cooper with a single.

Kelleher, the Forty-fourth Division's second baseman, scored on Singar's single in the third inning and crossed the plate in the seventh on Najar's double.

Pitcher John Windzigl, of the Forty-fourth, one-time Cumberland, Md., hurler, retired in the fifth after being hit by a batted ball and was relieved by Knothe.

Ed Ogonski, Bob Mathias Win at Meade

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., July 3.—In a slam-bang battle marked by three knockdowns, Edward Ogonski, of the Forty-fourth Division, defeated Leo Stoll, Twenty-ninth Division heavyweight, by a technical knockout in the third round of the feature fight of an interdivisional boxing tournament here today.

Stoll, Baltimore fighter weighing 206, had the advantage in the first round and a half of hard, close punching, but the Fort Dix fighter crashed him to the mat just before the end of the second. The bell ended the round while Stoll was down.

Bob Mathias Scores TKO

In the third round Ogonski again turned on his heavy artillery and the fight stopped when Stoll dropped for the third time. Ogonski, a Trenton, N. J., soldier, weighed 210.

In the 160-pound class Bob Mathias, of Washington, an engineer from the Twenty-ninth division, defeated Joe Tuccio, of Mount Kisco, N. Y., by a technical knockout in the second round.

Another fast, shifty Twenty-ninth Division man, Bill Brown, of Waynesboro, Pa., took a decision from Cliff Gaskins, of Schenectady, N. Y., in the 147-pound class.

D. C. Boys Lose

L. Muratore, of Newburgh, N. Y., a 135-pounder who battles under the name of Carmen Fatta, won a decision for the Forty-fourth Division from Joe Lewis, of Washington.

Ed Brazerol, 126 pounds, from Washington, won a decision over Robert Byrne, of the Forty-fourth, from Cliffside Park, N. J. Carmin Virgilio, of the Forty-fourth, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., took a decision from Frank Hodges, of Washington, in the 118-pound class.

Brave Sir Wins Feature At Delaware

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., July 3.—Miss Janet Brodsky's consistent gelding, Brave Sir, rung up his third triumph in five starts at the current meeting when he was first home in the featured 5½ furlong Bridgeville Claiming Purse here today.

Cool, cloudy weather was the order and it was a welcome change for some 6,500 fans who sat in on the proceedings. Last night's near-cloudburst left the track deep in mud, but despite the unfavorable footing the racing was fairly forceful.

Eight mediocre 2-year-olds answered the bugle for the Bridgeville and the fans made Brave Sir and Chuckle, the second horse, almost equal choices. When the field broke there was $10 more bet on Chuckle than Brave Sir in the straight pool. The pay-off on the Brodsky colorbearer was $6.70.

Bobby Merritt had the leg up on Brave Sir and he rode a winning race from start to finish. The gelding had opened up almost a two-length lead within the first quarter and he maintained that advantage right down to the wire. Chuckle forced Brave Sir's pace throughout and while he failed to menace the leader he was easily second best and earned that slice of the spoils by 3½ lengths over New Face. The latter raced in that position throughout.

Brave Sir used up 1.09 to complete the 5½ panels which gives one an idea of the bad condition of the track. The record for that distance is 1.05 2-5.

Overlin Would Quit Ring to Accept Matchmaking Position at Uline Area

Recently Married 'Play Boy' Yearns For the Quiet Life

By Al Hailey

Ken Overlin, whose recent dethronement as middleweight champion created a stir in boxing circles, is ready to call his 13-year-old fighting career to a halt to become Washingtons' newest matchmaker.

The "Conga Kid" of other years, who had an irresistible yen to explore the mysteries of such concoctions as the zombie and the daiquairi, is prepared to heed the call of home and fireside and to take on the task of trying what countless others have failed—make the Capital a red-hot boxing town.

Overlin, now safely and firmly past the 30-year mark, is seeking to wheedle a contract out of Michael J. Uline, the reluctant ice magnate who has a $700,000 ice palace going stale in northeast Washington.

May Meet Monday

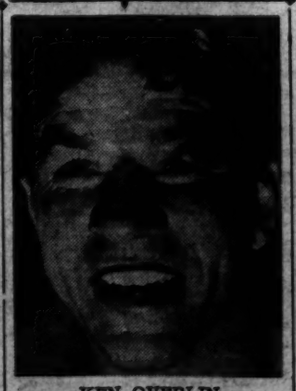
Uline, recently granted a boxing promoter's license, and Overlin are expected to get together for a talk Monday. Kenneth has made three fruitless trips to Uline Arena but as yet has only succeeded in routing out Uline's latest appointee, Lee Perrin, new manager of the arena.

"I would like to have the job because I think I could do some good as a matchmaker," Ken confessed. "But I want a contract. You know you might wake up some morning and find yourself out in the street unless you have that piece of paper."



KEN OVERLIN

Overlin revealed that he is going to step out in the role of radio sports announcer today at 6 p. m. over Station WWDC.

"If I can get the two going I'm going to quit boxing," he said, adding that he has a date with a prospective sponsor for his radio program Monday.

Ken's Disgusted

Overlin's decision to quit the game which took him into fight rings all over the world and catapulted him to fame when he won the middleweight crown from Ceferino Garcia is largely prompted by a sudden disgust with a turn of events which leaves him out in the cold.

Ken, currently feuding with his manager, Chris Dundee, insists that he is entitled to a return fight with Billy Soose or at least a share in the financial return from the forthcoming Soose-Georgie Abrams fight in Madison Square Garden.

Overlin lost the crown to Soose recently on an unpopular decision, and, under a clause of the contract which stated that either himself or Abrams be given a return fight, Kenneth lost out. Dundee chose to send Ken's young stablemate, Abrams, in against Soose, whom he has twice beaten by decision.

Overlin figures his wide experience in all fight ports makes him ideal tinder for a matchmaking role.

"You dont need Mike Jacobs to put on good fights," Ken said. "There's no such thing as a monopoly. Jacobs gets the services of the champions because they naturally want to fight for him after he has given them a chance to win the title. Im sure he'd let the champions come here, especially in over-the-weight matches. When I was champ, Uncle Mike never said anything to me. I fought 19 over-the-weight bouts."

One of Ken's chief reasons for settling down is his recent marriage. Ken and the former Miss Sylvia Venesky, of Washington, were married New Year's Day, and he says he wants a home life.

Match Point Leads All Way to Win 5th Race at Charles Town

Mrs. Noyes' Horse Takes 4th Victory

Repels Allen Caid's Drive in Stretch; Palumbo Boots Home Couple of Winners

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., July 3.—Mrs. Victor P. Noyes' Match Point, an Independence Day-eve hunch if you can stand for that "noise match" idea, won his fourth purse of the meeting today in the fifth event, outstanding race on the program. Jockey Willie Dufford, who has a high percentage of winners per mounts at the session here, kept the 7-year-old in front all the way and won by two lengths over Mrs. W. Anderson's Allen Caid. Two additional lengths farther back came Mrs. P. G. Simms' Agnes Knight to be third in the vest-pocket field of six going a mile and a sixteenth.

Match Point was installed the favorite, despite a package of 120 pounds, and paid a $5.20 mutuel. He was clocked in 1:53 3-5 for the route over a muddy track.

Dufford gave his backers only one uneasy moment during the race. Allen Caid, with Palumbo up, moved up menacingly entering the stretch and Dufford did not appear to be perturbed. However, he soon drew his whip and batted the veteran gelding along. Match Point responded by opening ground on his rival at the close.

Palumbo rode the first two winners. In the initial event, he booted Clifton's Dawn to the wire ahead of Trapping and Nassau's Beau. In the second he was in the saddle of Kenner, a $26.40 shot.

Much excitement marked the third race. Whatofit, the pacemaker and a "good thing" in the betting, was tiring in the stretch and bumped with Beacon Queen. Kelly on the latter snatched his mount away and held her strongly to the end to win. Vessell, who rode Whatofit, claimed a foul and after much deliberation Beacon Queen was disqualified in favor of Whatofit. Those with double tickets ending on Whatofit collected $440.

Dufford rode his second winner on the card in the sixth race, bringing High Bud, owned by John Bosley, jr., to the wire in front of Overbost and Blox.

At The Post

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Racing Secretary Freddie Burton has rounded up the best horses on the grounds for the July 4 program. The feature is the Independence Day Purse, a $1,000 affair at a mile and a quarter. Belle D'Amour looms as the favorite over Royal Business in the battle. Hot Man, Annikin and others are in the lineup. The secondary feature is the Defense Purse, involving a clash of Garden Pool, Clay Hill, Remolee, Shailleen and others. Well, hold your hats, fellows, here comes some news! The colt Walter Haight will be seen in action at Hagerstown. Owner Alan Clarke has turned him over to Trainer George Cook. I knew that name would be too much for him. Johnny Bringhurst, assisted by Willie Daly, will take entries here for Hagerstown. Bringhurst also acts as timer at the nearby track. "Huppy" Davis, who has been conspicuous by his absence here, is en route to Hagerstown, bringing the horses Huppy and Chilly Ebbie with him. Davis raced last winter in Cuba. Don't forget the auction of H. O. Will's horses this morning at 10:30 in the paddock. Tavern, Morocco D., Lead Please and Trixie Lass. C. M. Feltner will do the selling. Felter reports that he has sold Din to Chris Greer and Spout Run to Dr. J. W. Etheridge. Opinion was divided as to who bumped who when Beacon Queen was disqualified in favor of Whatofit in yesterday's third race. There is no question where the "wise" straight money was wagered. Whatofit, a maiden and never better than third in his life paid a mere $10.60, but in the daily double was a $440 price to the $84.30 quoted on Beacon Queen, a 7-2 shot. Maybe some of that Cumberland money came back. One thing I never could understand about race tracks is why a foul is not a foul at any stage of the race. For the most part riders are allowed to play football anywhere but in the stretch. Notice to Jockey Ever-ready: You didn't fool anybody in the fourth race yesterday. Good card today. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—KINDLE has plenty of speed and the off track will help. I'm going to take a shot at this one. WAY OUT and RADIO CHARM are fit as recent good efforts and will be in the thick of contention.

Second race—AUTOGO showed speed in a race here. Breaks off the rail with 100 pounds and thus rigged deserves a top selection. BUTCHER BOY is a hard running horse and belong close. MISS WING for the minor money.

Third race—PEPPERY had enough trouble last out to stop two horses and then finished second. This looks like the right spot. NIJINSKY has failed often but is due respect. SCHLEY BUCK for the show end.

Fourth race—The Johnston entry of DELHI DAN and CLAY HILL seems the best of these. Both are fit and ready. SHAILLEEN downed good ones last out but had to come from behind in the mud. GARDEN POOL for the third position.

Fifth race—BELLE D'AMOUR is the natural choice in this field. Gets in with ordinary weight and the route suits. ROYAL BUSINESS probably will not like the going but is the natural second choice. SUNNY ROSE was never better.

Sixth race—CLOCKS is a hard knocking horse and is likely to tote 121 pounds and whip these. I'm going to string along with him. CHIEF HOLLIS and POMARY to account for the place and show money.

Seventh race—PETSAMO appears to be the best bet of the day. Needs only to get a share of the racing luck. BROOKE HEROD and RUSSELL McGee are good ones. FRANK BROOKE would be right there but is a doubtful starter.

Eighth race—COUNT ME will have the right track and seems well placed in this field. CHANNING downed cheaper ones last out and is dangerous. PAMUNKEY can't be as bad as that last.

Substitute races—If No.1 is used, I'll take PANDORAMINT, JEAN C. and IVONIA. If No. 2 is used I prefer BROOKIE BOY, KINGOO and ENGLE'S WONDER.

Best bet—Petsamo.

Heinicke After Third 10-Mile Marathon Victory Here Today

Field of 37 To Compete In 14th Run

Philadelphia, N. Y. Runners Expected To Press Champion From Baltimore

Don Heinicke, Stonewall Club of Baltimore runner, will seek his third straight victory today in the annual July 4 marathon run, starting at 1:30 on the Mount Vernon Boulevard and ending on Van Buren Street as soon as some stout-hearted competitor gets there.

Heinicke heads a field of 37 deep-chested leggers who'll defy the heat and expose their tootsies to the unresilient hardness of the streets as they pound along a distance of 10 miles.

Expected to offer Heinicke the most opposition are George Leiberman of Philadelphia, Paul Fuchman of the Millrose A. A. of New York City, and the Otero Brothers, Albert and Charles, of the Mitchell A. A. of Philadelphia.

Leaving a designated point on the Mount Vernon Boulevard the field will cross Memorial Bridge to Constitution Avenue and continue up that thoroughfare to Fourteenth Street and E Street, one block on E to Thirteenth, out Thirteenth to Piney Branch Road, then right on Piney Road onto Van Buren and thence to the finish line.

This marathon is the fourteenth and is sponsored by the Takoma Park Citizens and the D. C. Recreation Department.

The first three Washington men to finish will be awarded A. A. U. medals and all those completing the race will be rewarded with Takoma Park Citizens' or D. C. Recreation medals. ## Tennis Rivals Have Champion Welsh 'In the Middle'

Robert Morris To Make Trip To Spokane

Robert L. Morris, the District's lone qualifier for the national public links championship, who was hospitalized the day after he won his place in Baltimore, has received his doctor's permission to make the trip to Spokane, Wash.

Morris will leave Tuesday afternoon with the five Baltimore qualifiers on the Capitol Limited. They are scheduled to arrive in Spokane next Friday, July 11, at 9:20 p. m. and will have two days of practice before the first day's qualifying, July 14.

Morris was forced to pass up an exhibition match in Baltimore, Sunday, between the qualifiers and a team of professionals, but he has since recovered and is virtually certain of making the trip. Andy Oliveri, former D. C. muny champion, is first alternate.

S. G. Loeffler, concessionaire of the District public courses, is picking up Morris' check for the entire trip. It will be the fourth straight trip to the national for the slim youngster, who will be out to earn a match play berth for the first time.

Golden Gate Auction Date Hearing Halted

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, July 3.—Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure signed an order today temporarily staying bankruptcy proceedings against the Golden Gate Turf Club of Albany.

The petition was presented in the name of four unsecured creditors of the track, which operated only a few days last winter because of heavy rains.

John D. Costello, one of the attorneys for the petitioners, said the proceedings were part of a plan to reorganize the track which was placed in the hands of a receiver early this year.

Today's action will halt a scheduled hearing on July 11 when a date for auction of the track property was to have been set.

Assets of the racing plant, when bankruptcy papers were filed recently, were set at $1,805,000, and liabilities at $715,337. Because of taxes and other items, liabilities now total around $900,000.

Spencer Captures Virginia Amateur Medal With 70

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., July 3.—Wynsol Spencer, 21-year-old Newport News player who was married just two weeks ago, won the Virginia State Amateur Tournament qualifying medal today for the second consecutive time when he equaled the competitive record for Simon-pures on the sporty Cascades course with a 1-under-par 70 for 18 holes.

Young Spencer, just a slip of a lad who can really swing into a golf ball, went out in 36 matching par for eight holes and going over once with a bogey six on the 562-yard fifth, generally considered Cascades' toughest hole.

He rammed home a 12-footer on the eleventh for a birdie two and clipped regulation figures again with a four on the 494-yard sixteenth to breeze home in 34 strokes.

The Cascades amateur record had been held jointly by Lawson Little, now a pro; Don O'Brien, of Richmond, whose balky putter today cost him a chance to topple the old mark, and Jimmy Watts, Lynchburg attorney and 1938 champion, who qualified today with a 72.

Unfavorable Bass Angling Reported At Shenandoah

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., July 3.—Shenandoah Valley fishermen will find conditions unfavorable on a large portion of the North and South Forks of the Shenandoah River for bass angling July 4, it was indicated today.

The North Branch, which merges with the South Fork at Riverton Junction, is still muddy from heavy downpours on last Sunday. The South Branch below the confluence is cloudy and may be expected to become muddy as the water moves down.

South of Riverton, the South Branch of the Shenandoah was reported in good shape save for portions made cloudy by local showers. Fishermen reported indifferent luck on the opening days of the season, those in the North Branch being annoyed by unusual growths of moss which they attributed to lack of rain and lack of high water during the early portion of the year.

Game Wanted

The Chevy Chase Dodgers are seeking an unlimited game for Sunday. Call Emerson 1491.

Sunday Game Sought

The Anacostia Athletic Club seeks an unlimited foe for Sunday afternoon on Fairlawn Field. Call Atlantic 8621-W, between 8 and 10 p. m.

Adair Leads Johnsen As Rain Halts Match

Defending Champion in Middle Atlantic Net Tournament Loses First Set, Leads Second

Showers made a timely intervention for Defending Champion Davie Johnsen in the quarter-final round the Middle Atlantic tennis championships yesterday at Columbia Country Club.

Young David was having a merry old time of it trying to convince Ralph (Buddy) Adair that Adair wasn't supposed to win when along came the rains to postpone until today their match and one other. In the only match played top-seeded Barney Welsh polished off Long Ellis, 6—0, 6—0, to go into semi-finals.

Adair, playing more smartly and more steadily than in any tournament match here in years, had taken the first set from Johnsen, 6—3, and was trailing only 2—3 in the second when play was stopped. They'll pick up today from the point of termination, but whether Adair can continue his unusually consistent stroking remains to be seen.

Another seeded and favored player who might have welcomed yesterday's rains was fourth-ranked Hugh Lynch who was having great trouble with Dick Canale, the Notre Dame star playing his first tournament here. Lynch won the first set, 7—5, dropped the second, 3—6, and was leading 1—0 in the third, when they had to quit.

The two interrupted matches, together with one between second-seeded Don Leavens and Bill Breese which hadn't started yesterday, will be played beginning at 9:30 this morning.

This will impose a heavy schedule on some of the boys who may have to play in three or four matches today. Lynch, for instance, may play in four matches. If he beats Canale in their resumed singles, he will then meet the winner of the Adair-Johnsen match. And if he and Welsh beat DeWitt Smith and Breese in their quarter-final doubles which will be continued from its point of interruption Wednesday, then Lynch will take the courts for the fourth time. He and Welsh, if victorious, would meet Adair and Eddie Miller for the right to gain the doubles finals. In the other doubles semifinal Leavens and Johnsen will tackle Charley Channing and Dick Murphy. J. H. M.

14th Regatta At Hampton Begins Today

By the Associated Press

Hampton, Va., July 3.—Hampton's fourteenth regatta, featuring long distance races from Gibson Island, Md., and Urbanna, will get underway at 10:40 tomorrow morning and with outboards holding the limelight tomorrow is expected to attract throngs of Fourth of July spectators to the shores of Hampton River.

Besides the eight different classes arranged for today for powerboat enthusiasts, 12 yachts have been entered in the Gibson Island race and five sailboats will make the trip from Urbanna to Hampton, both races starting tomorrow morning.

Taking advantage of the ebb tide in the Rappahannock River, five craft will sail off the mouth of Urbanna Creek at 7 tomorrow morning for the 5-mile journey to Hampton. The event will end off Old Point Comfort.

Tomorrow morning at 10, more than a dozen yachts will weigh anchor at Gibson Island to start the famous Virginia Cruising Cup race. Start of the event is near Baltimore light and the race will finish at a line between Old Point lighthouse and the light on Fort Wool, a distance of 129 nautical miles.

One of the entries in this race is the United States Naval Academy yacht Spindrift, whose commander also participated in the New London-to-Hampton race and the Hampton-to-Annapolis event last week. The craft has a handicap of 9:18.37. Also entered is John R. Sherwood's Gibson Girl, winner of last year's race.

Other boats entered in the cruising event with their handicaps are R. E. and G. Breed's Traveler, scratch; W. H. Labrot's Stormy Weather, 0:44.1; G. C. Kirkmyer's Windflower, scratch; Paul Patterson's Elda, 1:46.47; C. P. Schutt's Egret, 1:53.31; James H. Dunbar's Dryad, 2:00.29; H. Clay Primroses' Windward, 3:51.18; J. Miller Sherwood's Cygnet, 4:56.33, and Howard A. Perkins' Scala, 3:38.18.

Keyser Nine Host To Cameo Team

Special Dispatch to The Post

Keyser, W. Va., July 3.—The Cameo Athletic Club baseball team from Washington will come here tomorrow to oppose the Keyser Moose outfit of the Bi-State League in a twin bill starting at 1:30.

Manager Joe Carbacio will have "Bub" Bill, Elmer Hoffman and Harrison Mosser, former Keyser fireball, now residing at Washington, Pa., available for mound duty in the two games.

Baltimore Team, Local All-Stars Meet

Gas and Electric Co. softball ten, of Baltimore, which Monumental City fans are already visualizing as the coming State champions and representing the Old Line State in the National Championship Tourney at Detroit next month, tonight will make its first appearance here when it engages a team of Washington Stadium All-Stars in a double-header at Washington Softball Stadium at 8 p. m.

The Baltimore club, which has scored impressively over M. Shavitz & Son, last year's champion; Hoffberger Ice Co., runner-up last year; Tru-Fit Clothes, which only recently whipped Harold Steffes for his first defeat of the year in lacing Fat Boy, and Overnight Transportation Co., which carried Abe Rosenfield and Senate Beer to a 1-0 nine-inning tussle before bowing, has one of the finest young softball hurlers in the country in Paul Sherman, who will twirl one of the games tonight. Sherman has one of the most deceptive curves in the game and is reputedly one of the fastest.

Culled from all teams playing at Washington Softball Stadium, the All-Stars will be minus the services of "Cannonball" Jack Smith, Kavakos Grill's speedball merchant, who was due to hurl one of the tilts. Smith had previously made plans for a holiday vacation which he could not break. Steffes, Fat Boy's ace, however, will take the mound in one game.

Rock Hall Races Open Today On the Chester

By the Associated Press

Rock Hall, Md., July 3.—The two-day, fourth annual regatta of the Rock Hall Yacht Club, featuring sailing races only, will open tomorrow on the Chester River.

The races will be run over a 3-mile course opposite the clubhouse at the mouth of Lankford Bay in Piney Neck. Eight events will be decided on a point basis in a three-race series.

Special events scheduled for Saturday are the Rock Hall Handicap, open to all entrants in the regatta, and a race for skippers under 16 years of age sailing boats 16 feet and under in length.

Regatta officials are J. P. Copperthwaite, commodore; J. Harvey Brice, vice commodore; S. Scott Beck, jr., rear commodore; C. Franklin Wood, secretary, and Joseph B. Williams treasurer.

Mrs. Meckley Wins Trophy At Kenwood

Mrs. Betty Meckley added another cup to her collection yesterday over her home Kenwood course, winning the George Diffenbaugh Trophy play by a one stroke margin with a net of 74. The new crowned Maryland State champion played the nines in 40 and 39 for a 79 and deducted an ample five-stroke handicap for the winning score.

Mrs. Jack Jago, defending champion, and Mrs. A. A. McEntee tied for second with 92-17, 75, and 86-11, 75, respectively.

Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg won gross honors with 40-45, 85, as Mrs. Meckley, who was both low gross and net, elected to take the latter.

Major League Pitcher Who Left High-Paying Job Helps Out His Comrades at Camp Edwards

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 3.—Hughie Mulcahy, one of the hardest working pitchers the majors have had in years, hasn't changed a bit since he gave up his five-figure baseball salary to wear Uncle Sam's khaki for $21 a month at Camp Edwards.

Hughie, who doesn't drink, spends most of his nights taking care of his comrades in arms who do.

"They call me Ma Mulcahy," Hughie said. "But after all, I've been around so long that I couldn't sleep if I thought those kids were rambling around somewhere making chumps of themselves."

Maryland Officials Expect New Mark in 2-Ball Play Wednesday

Entries for Mixed Tourney at Columbia Close Monday; Junior Open to Be July 15

Maryland State Golf Association officials are looking for an all-time record entry for the Mixed Two Ball Tournament next Wednesday at Columbia Country Club. Entries close Monday with the association offices in Baltimore or with Dr. R. A. Keilty at Columbia.

Two other announcements received from Emmet Gary yesterday included notice of the fifth annual Junior Open Tournament to be played July 15 over the Roland Park course of Baltimore Country Club, and the State Open July 22 at Elkridge.

Junior Open entries close Monday, July 14, at 4 o'clock with Edgar Lucas at Baltimore C. C. There will be an additional 50-cent charge for post entries.

Prize money will be the usual $300 in the Maryland Open, $120 for first; $90, second; $60, third, and $30, fourth, plus amateur awards. Entries close Saturday, July 19, at 5 p. m. at 16 McClellan Place, Baltimore. The fee is $5 for pros and $3 for greenskeepers and amateurs. The course will be open for practice July 21.

Gun Club to Hold Shoot Tomorrow

The Washington Gun Club will hold its usual weekly meeting Saturday, and will put on a double trophy event, the first one at 16 yards, and following with a 25-target handicap contest. The Cadillac three-month trophy competition was decided last week, with E. N. Zebley the winner of the most legs.

This week's program will commence about 2 p. m., as usual, with visitors always welcome as contestants and as spectators, at the club grounds, Thirty-fourth and Benning Road Northeast.

Rock Plentiful In Chesapeake, Tributaries

By the Associated Press

Crisfield, Md., July 3.—Small rock from 6 to 10 inches long are plentiful in Chesapeake Bay and tributaries and may reach catchable size by early fall, a State Conservation Commission spokesman reported today.

These fish, which must reach 11 inches in length before they can be caught legally, were hatched during the spring of 1940 and 1939, he said. The 1939 crop rapidly is reaching legal size, he added.

The spokesman said many of the small rock are slipping through fishermens' nets. He asked both commercial and sport fishermen to return to the water all under-sized rock so that they may reach catchable size.

The State Conservation Commission, he said, has instructed its deputy commanders and inspectors to see that young rock are not caught.

Practically all of the rock hatched in Maryland stay in State waters, the spokesman explained. If the small rock are protected now, fishermen will be insured of good catches in September, October and November, he added.

FISHING WITH JACK BELL

Special Weekend Weather Forecast

Moderate northeast or east winds over north portion and moderate winds, mostly southwest, over south portions. Mostly cloudy weather with occasional showers. Probable local thundershowers with squalls today. Outlook for Saturday—moderate northeast or east winds, mostly cloudy weather with occasional showers and thunderstorms, New Jersey to Cape Hatteras.

Now is the time to find good fishing off Ocean City, Maryland. Tuna have arrived off Ocean City in large schools about a month earlier this year. Several parties have made very good catches, one party this past week caught 25 tuna weighing from 20 to 45 pounds. Best tuna caught there so far was a 122-pounder.

Bonito mackeral, those fast, racy fellows, are also earlier, putting in their appearance off Ocean City, Md. Many anglers are finding the bonito a very sporty fish, and it has been noticed that many fishermen who used to fish for blues are going after bonito. Some believe the bonito is about as gamey as the favored bluefish. Bluefish are still conspicuous by their absence, only a few small ones have been picked up. But—they are expected in good quantities a little later—as they are said to be on their way north at this time.

JACK BELL

These who like bottom fishing are having the time of their lives off Ocean City, catching porgies and sea bass. E. S. Ross, of Arlington, Va., and a party of five including S. Frank, D. C. Noldy, of Washington, D. C.; Lloyd Greene, of Calmar Manor, Md., and A. Norvitsky, of Baltimore, fishing off the Angler, captained by William Bunting, had such sport as they never had before. They caught fish until they tired, including a great number of porgies, some bonito and sea bass.

Surf-casters off Ocean City are enjoying themselves as much if not more than off-shore anglers. More channel bass have landed so far than the total catch of last year. More than 80 have been landed. All except 9 were red drum.

The weaker sex are still coming through with firsts and bigger fish. We have contended for some time that the women shall more and more show up with catches for the men anglers to shoot at. Mrs. Casher Evans, of Shelbyville, Del., was the first woman angler to land a drum, with the added distinction of catching the first black drum of the season. The heaviest drum landed at Ocean City, Md., to date weighed 52 pounds.

The first white marlin has been caught off Ocean City, Md., and others have been sighted. Reports probably will come in fast from now on.

In the past, anglers catching the biggest fish received all the prizes and trophies. With all the prizes available for the big fish the Earl Restaurant "Neptune Room," favorite gathering place of gourmet sportsmen, felt it was time that a fellow who comes in with hard luck stories of the big one that got away and the fellow who never catches much but has a swell time doing it should all have an equal chance with the expert angler to win a trophy.

They have put up the Neptune Cup, a beautiful bronze and copper cup standing 18 inches high. The cup is to become the property of the teller of the two best fish stories, a 1941 personal fishing adventure, witnessed ——and, a 1941 masterpiece of fishy fabrication and piscatorial perjury. Further details can be obtained at the Neptune. Here is a chance to make a fish story produce a fine trophy. Stories are being entered fast now.

Jack Nelson and George Lewellyn, two of our most consistent local fresh-water anglers, are having good sport right here near home catching small-mouth bass, out of Monocacy Creek north and around Frederick, Md. When the Monocacy Creek is clear it is one of the best streams in the East for small-mouth fly fishing. Bennett Creek is another good bet, although a smaller stream.

If you want some real sport with bluegills and crappie, with a good chance to pick up some small-mouth bass, try Tom's Creek up near St. Mary's College. The stream can only be reached by country roads. Take a road map and look the section over, north of Frederick, Md., and you should not have any trouble finding the way to Tom's Creek. The best part of it is east of the Frederick-to-Gettysburg Road. This is a fine stream to take that boy of yours to and break him into the game. He should not have any trouble hooking plenty of good bluegills—the big kind. Have him use a fly rod with most any kind of a fly. And, believe me, those scrappy bluegills and crappie on the table are really something.

There is every reason to believe that fishing in the Chesapeake Bay should be good over the weekend. Most any point along the bay should be good—just pick the place and go. Hardheads with a few trout or weakfish are to be caught most anywhere. Striped bass or rockfish are caught in only a few spots on the bay. Point Patience, near Solomons; Piney Point, and Point No Point are a few of the best places where they are caught. The newest spot where they are caught chumming with rockfish weighing 1 to 1½ live shrimp is Cedar Point, pounds are the kind that make sport on light tackle.

Britain to Take 600,000 Bales Of U. S. Cotton

By the Associated Press

The United States will supply Great Britain with upwards of 600,000 bales of cotton under terms of the lend-lease program, authoritative sources said yesterday.

The cotton will be taken from Government stocks acquired under grower-loan operations.

The British plan to take at least 20,000 bales a month as long as shipping space is available, it was said.

The British have been buying very little American cotton in recent months. A shortage of ocean shipping facilities, curtailment of civilian consumption of cotton goods in Britain and the existence of relatively large stocks were said to have been major reasons for the small purchases.

It was said that the British now desire to get additional supplies before current stocks were cut too low.

Rail Loadings In Week Climb To 11-Year Peak

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 908,664 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was an increase of 23,106 cars, or 2.6 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 156,017 cars, or 20.7 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 247,260 cars, or 37.4 per cent, compared with 1939.

Loadings were the highest since the week ended November 2, 1930, when they totaled 934,715 cars.

All classes of loadings showed gains with the exception of ore and less-than-carlot merchandise. The advance in total loadings was less than seasonally expected.

Dr. Ruhland Urges Public Not to Use Firecrackers

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, last night warned Washington residents against the dangers of explosive fireworks.

"Powder burns from firecrackers," said Dr. Ruhland, "are particularly dangerous as to potential cause of lockjaw."

He warned victims of burns to immediately consult a physician—no matter how minor the injury may seem.

U. S. Imports Increase, Total $392,000,000

Copyright by New York Times

Despite hostilities in Europe, Asia and Africa and on the whole because of them, imports into the United States during the fiscal year which has just ended increased by an amount which produced customs receipts for the 1941 fiscal year of $392,000,000 as compared with $349,000,000 for 1940.

Commissioner of Customs William R. Johnson pointed out today that in spite of shipping losses a steady stream of imports from Great Britain has been flowing into the United States all year. Wool, woolen goods, undressed furs, cut diamonds, whisky and tin are among the commodities moving from English ports. The only decline noted in imports from British sources was in rubber from British Malaya, which was due to the large reserve of crude stored here earlier in the year. Linen is not permitted to leave England or Northern Ireland due to British war needs.

Stocks Edge Fractionally Higher in Face Of Cloudier War News, Record Tax Outlook

New York, July 3.—The stock market maintained its balance today in the face of cloudier war news, prospects of a record tax bill and indications of further Federal restrictions on industry.

Mild forward tendencies were displayed by most leaders at the start in fairly active dealings. There was some let-down in prices after midday but fractional advances were well in the majority at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks held a net gain of .1 of a point at 41.8 on top of a .2 upturn the day before. Transfers expanded to 463,770 shares, compared with 394,540 Wednesday.

Brokers reported considerable short covering by those who wanted to have a fairly clean slate over tomorrow's holiday when all major markets will recess. In addition, there was a smattering of investment buying on the idea trends recently have shown a disposition to ignore bearish foreign developments such as the admitted successful thrusts of the Nazis in Western Russia.

New highs for the year were posted by Pepsi-Cola, whose directors voted a $1 dividend late yesterday; American Woolen preferred and Atlantic Gulf & West Indies common and preferred.

Southern Railway, Great Northern and Chesapeake & Ohio were a shade ahead nothwithstanding last week's freight loadings, on the basis of the Associated Press Index, were up less than seasonably although the aggregate was the largest since 1930.

Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Sperry, United Aircraft and Consolidated Aircraft responded to mounting orders for Army and Navy planes with modest improvement.

Others on the upside included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Woolworth, American Telephone, Kennecott, Anaconda, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, J. I. Case, Johns-Manville and Philip Morris.

General Motors and Chrysler were under water as the automobile makers were warned they might have to triple their defense production load. Output of new cars this week was off due partly to Independence Day suspension.

Pirelli of Italy (American shares) slumped 38½ points to 37½ on the first sale since June 7. Commonwealth & Southern preferred, up 5 Wednesday, fell 1½.

Advancing in the curb were Creole Petroleum, Cessna Aircraft, Bell Aircraft, Pantepec and Pennroad. Aluminum of America dipped along with American Cyanamid "B," Brewster Aero and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Turnover here was around 96,000 shares against 84,000 in the preceding session.

A group of rails and utilities attracted a following in today's bond market and moved up fractions to a point or so while the main list idled in a narrow range.

Volume was little changed from Wednesday, totaling $7,246,550, par value, compared with $7,291,000. Of the five major group in the Associated Press average, three were down slightly and two advanced a shade. The gainers were the rails and industrials while low-yields, foreign and utilities eased.

Raw Silk Leaps As Key Staples Move Unevenly

By the Associated Press

Raw silk highlighted commodity futures markets yesterday with a rise of 4½ to 5 cents a pound, the widest move in some time. Concern of mill consumers over adequacy of future supplies was intensified by reports that the Japanese government had called certain of its merchant ships back to home ports.

Straits tin also reflecting the Far Eastern shipping problems was marked up .25 to .40 of a cent.

Other New York markets fluctuated irregularly. Cottonseed oil made a further closing recovery of .18 to .25 of a cent a pound from the lows reached in a heavy selling movement on Monday and Tuesday.

Cotton and cocoa futures sold moderately lower. Hides dipped sharply. Santos coffee and wool tops were mixed. The domestic sugar contract was steady.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples declined to 88.89 per cent of the 1926 average from 88.74 per cent Wednesday.

Grains Move Narrowly

Chicago, July 3 (AP).—News from Russia and the usual preholiday inertia kept wheat prices within a narrow rut today. Caution was the trading watchword and most dealers confined operations to adjustment of accounts for any eventuality over the holiday.

Price dips ranging up to ⅛ cent at times registered the market's modest response to limited hedging pressure associated with movement of new and old free wheat. This selling was offset by small scale mill buying and short covering which frequently were sufficient to give prices small net gains. The close, however, was ⅜ lower to ⅛ higher compared with yesterday, July, $1.04; September, 1.04@1.05⅛.

Corn finished unchanged to ¼ lower, July, 73¼; September, 75¾@75⅝; oats unchanged to ⅛ off; soybeans, 1½@2¼ higher; rye, ⅜ off to ⅛ up, and lard 2-10 higher.

Auto Output Drops in Week Due to Holiday

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 3.—Ward's Reports, Inc., today estimated automobile production this week at 96,457 units, attributing the decline from last week's 127,926 to the four-day schedules prevailing because of the Independence Day holiday. A year ago this week assemblies numbered 51,975.

The survey said next week would see something of a rebound, but that volume would not come up to pre-holiday levels.

The trade paper Automotive News in its weekly survey estimates today that assemblies this week will total 96,902 units, compared with its estimate of 125,824 last week. A year ago, it said, production for this week totaled 53,783 cars and trucks.

The publication added that final assembly lines at Nash and Hudson were shut down as these companies completed 1941 model output.

Placing June output at 533,856 cars and trucks, Automotive News estimated the total production of new cars and trucks for the first six months of 1941 at 3,134,680 units. In the same period a year ago 2,539,440 motor cars were turned out. Highest first six months' production in the industry's history was 3,413,804 units in 1929.

The survey places General Motors output this week at 44,152 units, against 55,184 last week; Chrysler at 21,392, compared with 26,773, and Ford at 20,400, against 27,493 last week.

The publication, Automotive Industries, said in its weekly review that inventories in dealers' hands dropped to 189,600 new cars as of June 1. It added that this was only about a ten-day supply at the May selling rate and indicated a probable shortage of 1941 model cars when the present production runs are concluded late in July. "Several companies," it said, "already are unable to supply any additional dealer orders."

Listen!
with Glynn

There really seem to be some people who think of everything.

Take Paul White, for instance, the gentleman who is the Director of Public Affairs for the Columbia network, which means that in addition to multifarious other jobs, he arranges all those broadcasts from the warring foreign capitals which you hear every night and morning over WJSV.

For years there hasn't been a broadcast out of Moscow to America. The Soviets just weren't the kind of people who seemed to approve of them. And American broadcasters in general had just about given up hope of ever getting one.

But that didn't stop Paul White from making arrangements with Novelist and Playwright Erskine Caldwell and his famed photographer-wife, Margaret Bourke White, as they left for China and Russia several weeks ago, to do some broadcasts from Moscow. Paul has witnesses who can attest that, as he made the arrangement with the Caldwells, he said, "It's a 100-to-1 chance, but it might come through."

And that, my children, is why CBS had the first direct American news broadcast out of Moscow last Sunday and will have a lot more with those two intelligent observers as the speakers.

Things have changed so that Soviet authorities have extended permission to the Caldwells to stay in Moscow throughout the war to report the activities.

Contract Bridge

Throwing away an honor, particularly a king, is always certain to make a great hit with the gallery. Ralph Gresham sends a hand in which just such strategy succeeds to win three no trump. The discard, while seemingly a great waste of material, actually uncovers an entry to dummy for declarer.

The cards and bidding are presented in today's box. West leads a low diamond, a small card is played from dummy and East puts on the ace. R. G. takes up the play from there; he says:

"Declarer can see seven tricks and must develop two more. It seems most likely that these two additional tricks can be developed in the spade suit and in this event the two adverse spade honors should be divided and three entries to dummy should be made available, two for spade leads to trap one of the missing honors and another for cashing the remaining high spade.

"Since two entries to the dummy are already available, the heart king and the club king, the third entry can be developed if West has four diamonds to the queen, which his opening lead probably indicates. Accordingly, declarer should drop his diamond king under the diamond ace. This is the correct play since West does hold four diamonds to the queen and cannot prevent South from geting into the North hand with the jack of diamonds. South makes three no trump, taking three spades, three hearts, one diamond and two clubs."

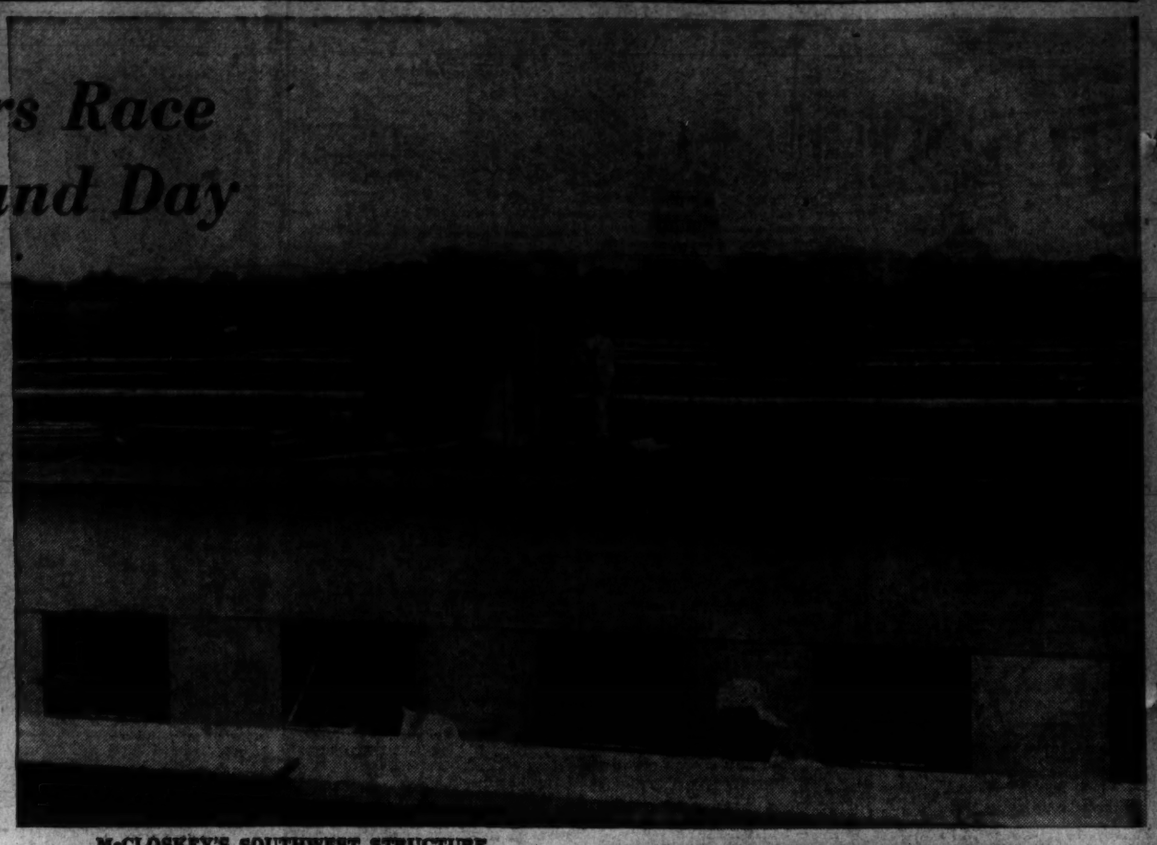
TOMPKINS' NAVY "TEMPO" BUILDING



McCLOSKEY'S SOUTHWEST STRUCTURE

Post Staff Photos—Goodwin

Defense Building Race Enters 'Reel 2'

Remember those two-reel movie comedies, circa 1920, in which action was speeded up for a cop-and-robber chase?

One is reminded of them in watching men at work on the two temporary office buildings which are under construction downtown, one at Fourth Street and Independence Avenue Southwest and the other behind the Navy Building.

A friendly rivalry existing between the two building crews is turning the two separate projects into a veritable race. Go down to either job and the action you'll see is enough to make your head swim.

The Southwest structure, being erected by McCloskey & Co., was started first but the fact that it is somewhat larger sort of evens matters. Construction began on May 23. Today it is 55 per cent completed and virtually certain to be turned over to the Government before the 75-day contract time has expired.

Costing $510,800, the building is a two-story affair, 527 feet long, with seven wings. Carpenters, roofers, laborers and other workmen move around as if they had bees in their trousers.

In contrast with the Southwest building, where a straight five-day week, eight-hour day are being maintained, the Navy "tempo" is on a two shift-a-day basis. When one shift knocks off at 4 p. m., a second takes up where the first left off.

Charles H. Tompkins Co., of Washington, is erecting the Navy job.

According to the Public Buildings Administration, whose engineers are supervising both projects, the Navy structure is 57 per cent completed, although only a little more than 40 per cent of the contract time has been used up.

ON MAY 23, WORK WAS STARTED ON THE NOW 55 PER CENT COMPLETED STRUCTURE ON THE MALL

IN DOUBLE TIME—Waterboy George Shoemaker on the McCloskey job, Fourth Street and Independence Avenue Southwest, carries two buckets instead of the usual one in keeping with the fast pace set by workmen

Take These Tips With You Over the Weekend—Blondes Especially

Like sour apples, rainfall and clarinet trilling, sunshine is very beneficial, indeed, in its effects upon the human body—when taken in moderation.

Indulged in to excess, however, the result may be a severe case of cramps, the sniffles, a tin ear or sunburn—possibly even skin cancer—respectively.

You might bear that in mind if you are planning to spend this Independence Day out doors, soaking up the sun on a beach, in a boat, on golf links or tennis courts, or anywhere else.

Experts to whom The Post turned yesterday for sunshine tips said: Don't stay too long in the sun.

Give the epidermis a coat of olive oil or some other good burn preventive if you want to be on the safe side. Even then, however, don't think you can get away with too much.

If you should get back home with a neck, arms and back that feel like a steak on a charcoal grill, apply olive oil or cold cream to the affected parts. But if you're in agony, better not gamble with self-treatment. See a doctor.

As explained by a National Institute of Health scientist, who is doing research into the relationship of excessive radiation and skin cancer, sunburn is produced by the sun's ultra violet. Since these rays do not penetrate glass, don't figure on getting a thick coat of tan behind a window.

On the other hand, you can get sunburned even on a cloudy day. That's because the water vapor in the clouds doesn't block out the ultra violet. Smoke does, however. Since beaches are rarely smoky, one's chances of getting a burn there are greater than they are in the city.

Doctors agree that absorption of sunshine beyond a certain point is potentially dangerous, but it is difficult to fix the danger line. The reason is not only that no two persons have the same sensitivity, but also because one does not get a burn warning until he is already burned.

Blondes, particularly, should take care not to pretend they are cactus plants, or something, and impervious to the sun's rays. For it is fairly well established that Old Sol, like gentlemen, prefers blondes. They're the ones who burn the worst.

Flop of Ruth-Cobb Golf Match Puzzles Sports Pundits

By Bill Cunningham

In the matter of expected attendance that failed to show up, the largest and flattest egg paid by any highly publicized athletic event since Kid David hung one upon the kisser of K. O. Goliath characterized the recent duels between Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth at golf over two pastures in the East. The two baseball immortals were undoubtedly saddened a little by it and even veteran sports writers were flabbergasted.

Playing first in Boston, where the Babe began his career and has always been public Hero No. 1, and where the flaming Tyrus rests in history and memory as the dearest enemy Boston baseball fandom ever had, they drew but about 1,000 people to a centrally located course, as easy to reach as a theater. Moving then to New York, under a full head of ballyhoo, with every sports writer beating his drum and even the radio hog-callers giving it their most golden and hortatory treatment, the match drew exactly 104 paid admissions.

Two caddies from two rival golf courses would probably have done about as well.

There were no mitigating circumstances worth mentioning. There just wasn't much of anybody who cared, and the sports writers frankly couldn't believe it. We don't know why yet, and I'm more or less asking you.

It Looked Like a Natural

It's true they're not very good golfers, but nobody was trying to peddle 'em as golfers. We figured there'd be thousands who'd gladly pay a dollar just to see the pair of them walking along a fairway together. They're $100,000,000 worth of baseball history.

They were, and are, great rivals, although their careers didn't exactly overlap. They'd been spoiling for years to get at each other in golf. Both are left handers. Neither had ever even seen the other play. Each is a nine handicap man. Each takes it seriously. Each wanted more than anything else in the world to pin the other's ears back.

That seemed to constitute a natural, especially when it was all for sweet charity. We expected at least 5,000 people, maybe more, to storm both places, and so far as the golf went, we thought it might even be like the pretty Hollywood dancing star, Mary Martin, who went with a unit of movie people to one of the California camps to entertain the soldiers.

No One Wanted to Look

The young lady had a blister on her foot and couldn't dance, so the story goes and when introduced to the cheering soldiers, she stood there prettily embarrassed, and finally managed to say, "I can't dance for you, and I'm really very much at a loss, for I don't know what I can do."

"That's all right," came a voice from the khaki-massed balcony," just stand there and let us look at you."

But it wasn't like that with our two old heroes. Maybe we fingers of the self-commencing adjective get drunk on our own ink or hypnotized by our own ideas of what the public would like to see or say or hear. I'm treading with rubber heels for a while. I'd have bet my sox on this one as a sure fire show on any golf course in the world.

Would you pay a dollar to see it in your home town, Brother, the buck to go on intact to some homeless kids, or to the soldiers?

Well, maybe not, but I still can't see the how-come of the why. I missed the psychology of that one a country mile.
